Choice of Governor and Congressmen to Give Roosevelt Verdict.

Dry Law Repeal Up for Decision

Administration Policies Are Sole Issue Put Before Electors.

Portland, Me., Sept. 10 (AP).—Returns from 126 precincts out of 631 in the State give:

For, 3,230; against, 2,002.

Portland, Me., Sept. 10 (AP).—Maine voters gave their opinion today on the New Deal and Gov. Louis J. Brann (Democrat), in an election that appeared to have drawn unusually large numbers to the polls.

The intensity of the campaign, in which Republican candidates and supporting orators assailed the New Deal and the Roosevelt Administration while Democrats defended it, created the unusual interest.

A Governor, a United States Senator and three Congressional Representatives were to be chosen. The voters also passed on repeal of the State prohibition amendment and several referendum questions.

The polls in cities and larger towns closed at 7 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) with some of the smaller communities having the option of closing earlier.

New Deal the Issue.

Gov. Brann, seeking reelection, an honor never yet accorded a Democrat, was the chief target of the Republican campaign. His election, the G. O. P. told the electorate, would mean that Maine had placed the stamp of approval on the New Deal.

Fighting back, with his record as chief executive for his principal weapon, Gov. Brann gave only scant attention to National issues. He cited reductions in the expenses of State government. His nearest approach to National affairs was the counsel that a Democratic Governor would be likely to receive more assistance for Maine from the Administration than a Republican.

Brann's opponent was Alfred K. Ames, conservative and retiring lumberman from Machias. Older and not the orator nor aggressive campaigner that Brann is, Ames in his few speeches carried the Republican war cry against the "New Deal" and promised to give a business man's administration.

England Backs Arms Embargo

Move Assures Halt in Guns to Gran Chaco War Area.

Geneva, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—The first world-wide arms embargo, designed to end war between Bolivia and Paraguay, became operative tonight with Great Britain's announcement ment she had put the embargo actively into effect against the warring nations.

The United States, Russia and Brazil, nonmembers of the League of Nations—Leading in the embargo move as the surest way to halt the war—associated themselves with league members in this effort to check the savage fighting in the "green hell" of the Gran Chaco in South America.

The league invited 36 nations to participate in the world-wide arms embargo against Bolivia and Paraguay. They comprise all the powers producing war materials, and the countries across whose territories arms might have to pass to reach the belligerents.

Japan and Germany, who have announced their withdrawal from the league, but who are still officially members, indirectly indicated they would observe the embargo.

Inasmuch as both Bolivia and Paraguay are almost entirely dependent upon foreign arms supplies, it was hoped the measure would bring the war to an end.

The embargo was considered vitally important because it established a precedent which can be applied quickly to more important disputes in future.

3 Admit Kidnap Plot On Canadian Premier

Ottawa, Sept. 10 (AP).—Ottawa police said tonight that one of three men arrested here on housebreaking charges confessed that Premier R. B. Bennett was marked as victim in a kidnaping plot hatched here during the past month.

Ritchie Strong In 2 Counties Near District

Montgomery and Prince Georges Are Split on G. O. P. Candidates.

This is the ninth and last article in a series on the political situation in Maryland preliminary to the primary election tomorrow.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although Gov. Albert C. Ritchie appears to be the choice for a fifth term of a majority of Democrats in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, the outcome in those places of the three-cornered gubernatorial fight among the Republicans is expected to be close in tomorrow's primary election.

On the basis of organization support and past performances, Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough seems to have an edge for the Republican nomination for Governor in each of these two counties adjoining the District of Columbia. His supporters, however, are under sharp attack from those backing Harry W. Nice. H. Webster Smith, the third Republican contender, is reported out of the fight as far as these two counties are concerned.

For the first time in a generation, the day of a primary election will be quiet in Montgomery County. For years the Lee and old Peters factions battled over supremacy of the party in the county on primary day—with sharp contests for every place on the ticket.

This year, however, the anti-Lee faction decided to keep out of the primary. They formed a fusion movement with the Republicans and entered a local ticket for the general election in November against the Lee organization slate.

26 Held for Plot On Caffery's Life

Cuban Army Acts to Protect U. S. Ambassador.

Havana, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Army authorities revealed tonight the arrest of 26 persons, who were held on charges of plotting against the life of United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery.

The arrests were presumably of men believed involved in recurrent efforts at terrorism to embarrass the regime of President Carlos Mendieta, toward which Caffery is known to be more friendly than some antigovernment groups believe necessary.

Doctor and His Son, 10, Found Slain in Hotel

Danville, Ill., Sept. 10 (AP).—Dr. Carl F. Bookwalter, 55, a Chicago physician, and his 10-year-old son, William Ellis, were found shot to death in the Hotel Wolford today.

The son apparently had been shot as he slept, one bullet entering the heart and one the head. The father's body was slumped beside the bed, a bullet wound in the temple. A revolver was found under his body.

NRA Policies Emulate Reds, Says Hoover

Free Thought Repression Laid to Bureaucracy, in Latest Attack.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10 (AP).—Continuing his broad attack on the Administration's policies, Herbert Hoover, in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, declares some Roosevelt measures are "emulating parts" of Fascist, Socialist and Communist systems of government.

"It is obvious that many of these measures," the former President writes, "represent not reform or relief within the boundaries of liberty, but that they are emulating parts of these other systems with the hope of speeding recovery from the depression."

As in Mr. Hoover's first copyrighted article, the portions of "consequences to liberty of regimentation" released for publication by the magazine do not mention by name President Roosevelt or his Administration.

The second article, however, refers to "examples of National regimentation we have examined," previously described as delegations of legislative and judicial functions to the Executive arm of the Federal Government.

Results of Bureaucracy.

Declaring bureaucracy inevitably follows regimentation, Mr. Hoover continues:

"No one with a day's experience in government fails to realize that in all bureaucracies there are three implacable spirits—self-perpetuation, expansion and an incessant demand for more power.

"These are human urges and are supported by a conviction, sometimes justified, that they know what is good for us. Nevertheless, these spirits are potent and possess a dictatorial complex.

"They lead first to subversive influence in elections. They drive always to extension of powers by interpretation of authority, and by

Murray Pardons Felon 10 Years After Break

Oklahoma City, Sept. 10 (AP).—John V. Harris, Oklahoma prison fugitive of a decade ago who became a respected citizen of Sioux City, Iowa, was granted a full pardon today by Gov. W. H. Murray.

Harris, now 41, was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1922 for an alleged part in the lynching of a colored packing plant worker during a strike here. He failed to return to prison upon expiration of a leave of absence, and was not heard from until recently when he was arrested in Sioux City.

Court Metes Death For Attack on Bride

Tyler, Tex., Sept. 10 (AP).—John B. Willis, Lousiana former convict, was convicted tonight of criminally assaulting Mrs. Maxwell Herring, young bride and former University of Texas sudent, and was sentenced to death.

The jury deliberated 45 minutes.

Origin of Convulsions Found In Sugar-Formed Acid of Body

Cleveland, Sept. 10 (AP).—The origin of convulsions, found in discovery of a pecular acid which the body makes out of sugar, was reported to the American Chemical Society here today.

A new step in glass making, which promises huge telescopes surpassing in size anything yet conceived, also was described.

The convulsion discovery comes out of a study of kojic acid made by Theodore E. Friedmann of the University of Chicago. The acid was first found in 1907, but until three years ago there was not enough of it for experiments.

Then Mr. Friedmann said its chemical nature was revealed—a substance very much like glucose. This suggested that kojic acid could be substituted for sugar in diabetes. In small quantities it worked well in dogs. But it poisoned them in large doses. It acted like overdoses of insulin in causing violent convulsions.

This led recently to the discovery of kojic acid's role in convulsions. Tests showed that it caused the same sort of "wet brain" which is often found in epileptics. This excess water in the brain is associated with uremia and other hypertension diseases.

The chemists found that the acid acted directly on the nervous system. Also that it affects respiration.

The stuff is now manufactured in the laboratory directly out of glucose. Mr. Friedmann said there is a strong supposition that the body makes the acid out of sugars, and that it may be the sugar derivative that accounts for the energy which comes from eating sugars.

The dog convulsion experiments showed its remarkable potency. Even if only a little kojic acid was produced in one part of the brain, Mr. Friedmann said, it could cause general convulsions. Such a convulsion center might be so small that after death it was difficult to locate either the place or the acid by autopsy.

Inquiry Finds British Arms Peddled Here

By Robert C. Albright.

Forecasts of renewed hostilities in the Far East and roundabout proposals for the United States to ship surplus British arms to China yesterday were spun through the intricate web of Senate munitions testimony.

The plan for arming China was proposed to the American Armament Corporation by the Soley Armament Co., Ltd., dealers in Great Britain's huge surplus of war wares, in letters naming the domestic concern as the Soley agent in this country.

"In spite of all the dreams of the idealists, who imagine that homo sapiens is filled with honor, justice, love and self-sacrifice, Japan is going to take a still larger slice of China, and comparatively shortly, while the getting is good," wrote John Ball, managing director of the Soley Armament Co., in March of this year.

Du Pont Issues Statement.

Meantime, President Lammot du Pont of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., in a statement preliminary to taking the Senate committee's witness stand tomorrow, issued a blanket denial to stockholders that their company played any role in fomenting war, "disloyal" foreign activities or war "profiteering."

"On the contrary," read the Du Pont statement, "not only the strong natural sympathies of its management but also * * * the plain business interests of the company lie overwhelmingly in the direction of continued maintenance of world peace."

New evidence of international grappling for the world's munitions markets was read into the Senate committee's record yesterday as officials of the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation charged "unfair" methods and use of "grease" by foreign competitors in vending aircraft and arms abroad.

Unfair Methods Denied.

"Has your concern used any such methods?" Chairman Gerald P. Nye of the Senate committee queried President J. S. Allard, president of the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation.

'Moving Mountain' Slides, Destroying Trail for Tourists

Durango, Colo., Sept. 10 (AP).—Durango's slithering mountain shuddered again today and thousands of tons of debris crashed down its north face.

The convulsion caused a landslide over a large portion of the trail used by hundreds of tourists to view the peak. Nobody was injured and there was no property damage.

The mountain, Carbon Peak, has been disintegrating and burning for 18 months. Geologists say there apparently is a huge bed of coal under the mountain and a subterranean fire has started.

Arsonists Set Liner Afire, Officers Tell U. S. Inquiry; Previous Attempt Revealed

Capital Sees Early Peace In U.S. Mills

Points at Issue, Says Board, Are Open to Solution.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

After communicating with the board, Francis J. Gorman, outspoken union chairman, extended for 24 hours an offer to agree to arbitration, which was due to have expired at 6 o'clock last night.

The board's optimistic comment came on the heels of a series of conferences with George A. Sloan, Cotton Textile Institute chairman. The board, appointed last week, made known for the first time that its work had emerged from the exploration stage into the field of peace negotiations.

In a to-the-point statement the mediators announced:

"The board is proceeding with conferences and negotiations with both sides and has explored the situation sufficiently in four days of inquiry to know that the problems arising out of the textile dispute are not impossible of solution. The board believes that a settlement can be reached which will be fair to workers, employers and in the public interest.

"It is our earnest hope that while these discussions are in progress all parties to the dispute use their utmost endeavors to preserve law and order in all strike areas."

Sloan Will Return.

Sloan reported he would return today with his aid, William V. Lawson, and "10 or 12 outstanding cotton manufacturers from the North and South" for another talk with Gov. John G. Winant, of New Hampshire and the other Presidential mediators.

It was considered significant that Gov. Winant conferred during the day with Agricultural Adjustment Administration officials. They were understood to have discussed the 4.2 cents a pound cotton processing tax at length.

Observers recalled that Sloan some time ago cited the processing levy as one of the chief reasons why cotton textile manufacturers were having difficulty in making expenses.

Monticello, Ark., Sept. 10 (AP).—The "no dancing" sign was hung out again at Monticello A. and M. College here today as students came into Arkansas' second largest educational institution to register for the fall term.

Still standing by the guns of strict discipline which inspired a campus strike last year and two subsequent unsuccessful movements to oust him from office, President Frank Horsfall of the college was backed up by his board in the promulgation of rules for the new semester.

Johnson Talks To Roosevelt On NRA Fate

Administrator's Future Is Discussed, Too, in Late Night Session.

(Post Staff Writer).

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 10.—President Roosevelt sat across the table from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson until a late hour tonight, discussing the future of NRA and, indirectly, the future activities of his fiery recovery administrator.

In the seclusion of the Roosevelt estate, the two went over the question which has split the ranks of the New Deal—whether the NRA will continue under one-man control, or whether an independent board will be created to revamp the machinery and policies of Gen. Johnson.

The latter arrived at Hyde Park early tonight aboard an Army amphibian plane from Bolling Field, Washington. Landing on the Hudson River near the Poughkeepsie Yacht Club, Gen. Johnson proceeded at once to Hyde Park House for dinner.

With the recovery administrator was Miss Frances Robinson, his personal secretary and assistant administrator. She left the yacht club for the country home of George Buckley, a deputy administrator of the NRA, several miles from the Roosevelt estate.

On behalf of the President, it was stated that he intended to devote most of tonight to a general discussion of NRA with Gen. Johnson. But no inkling of what, if anything, was determined by the conference could be learned, since the administrator was the overnight guest of Mr. Roosevelt and did not leave the estate.

Indications, however, were that the meeting was confined to the immediate problem of settling on the Administration of the NRA, since the shortness of the conference hardly permitted full consideration of all the questions involved—such

'Reds' Set Fire To Ship, Cuban Police Charge

Passenger Had Chemicals Chief Says; Passenger Planes Guarded.

(Copyright, 1934, by The Associated Press.)

Havana, Sept. 10.—Four sections of the Cuban government tonight speeded their investigation into the disastrous fire aboard the liner Morro Castle as Havana's chief of port police, Capt. Oscar Hernandez, charged flatly that Communists set the fire.

At the same time secret police were searching every passenger and every piece of baggage leaving on Pan-American Airways planes after the aviation company had received anonymous threats from terrorists.

George Grant Mason, jr., Pan-American's representative for the Caribbean, confirmed the fact that the threats had been made.

Such anonymous warnings were not unusual, however, Mason said.

A mysterious telephone call brought the latest warning, Mason revealed.

"This is X-247," the caller was quoted as saying. "Remember the number. Search every piece of mail leaving on today's plane because I learned through a woman that a bomb will be put aboard the plane."

This occurred, Mason said, during the recently ended strike of postal employes. All mails were searched, but without result.

Hernandez said his theory of the Morro Castle disaster was that a passenger had carried fire-making chemicles aboard the ship in his luggage when he went up the gangway at Havana and that the passenger subsequently placed these chemicals where they would do the most harm.

Motorists on Relief Defended by Officials

A large number of the "clients" on District relief rolls own and use automobiles, relief officials admitted yesterday in replies to criticism made public by Rufus Lusk, secretary of the Washington Taxpayers Protective Association.

Not only is that fact known to them, officials said, but they seek to conserve the automobiles as assets of their clients through which they are enabled to find jobs and funds with which to eke out the inadequate relief funds advanced to them.

A check of approximately 6,000 relief clients at the Federal Surplus Commodity Distribution Center at First street and Constitution avenue from August 29 to September 5, Mr. Lusk said, showed that 570 "or about 10 per cent of them arrived or drove away in autos of various kinds." Of this number, Mr. Lusk said, 469 were passenger cars, 43 were taxicabs, 58 were trucks and two were motorcycles. A check of the license tags disclosed the resale value of the vehicles was almost $60,000, he added.

"While Fords and Chevrolets predominated," he continued, "there were six Packards, two Pierce Arrows, one Cadillac, one La Salle, 24 Buicks, five Chryslers, 10 Hudsons, 16 Nashs, five Oldsmobiles two Auburns, one Peerless, 11 Studebakers and three Marmons.

"Many of the cars that drew up were practically new. A striking example, although not typical, was that of a man and his wife who drove up in a new 1934 Chevrolet. At the beginning of the year this particular client had a 1930 Chevrolet but he managed somehow to get himself a new car within the last few weeks."

"I am very glad indeed that Mr. Lusk takes such interest in the relief situation," Commissioner George E. Allen said. "I can't understand, however, why he did not furnish relief officials with the information he sent the newspapers.

"There are undoubtedly chiselers on relief. My experience would indicate that between 3 and 5 per cent of those on the rolls are chiselers who don't belong there. But you can't let such a small percentage warp your judgment of the whole 100 per cent.

We are wiping chiselers off the rolls daily whenever we find them. But you can't indict a whole system because a fellow rides in an automobile.

"We will investigate any specific

Prisoners Seize Locomotive; 2 Killed Trying to Flee Joliet

Joliet, Ill., Sept. 10 (AP).—A sharp fusillade from a rifle squad, led by the warden, put a sudden end to a daring attempt of four convicts at Stateville Prison to commandeer a locomotive today and ram their way through iron gates to freedom. Two of the prisoners were killed, another critically injured, the fourth captured, and a guard was shot.

The dead were: Frank Bellinger, serving 1 to 20 years for robbery, from Cook County, and Fred R. Barry, serving 1 year to life for armed robbery in Cook County.

The wounded convict was Frank Souder, of Benton, Ill., serving a life term for the kidnaping of James Hackett, Blue Island gambler. Joseph Donahue, Peoria robber, fourth member of the band, was captured and placed in solitary confinement.

The wounded guard was William Pentrosky, who was seized by three of the convicts when he rushed out of the furniture shop in response to the first alarm and was used as a shield by the prisoners.

The convicts first boarded a switch engine inside the walls piloted by Engineer George Tatro and demanded that he drive his locomotive through the gates. Tatro refused, felled one of the prisoners with an iron bar and shouted for help. It was his call that brought Pentosky on the scene.

The convicts started to flee but three of them seized Pentosky and put a knife to his back to guarantee their immunity from guards' fire. The fourth, Donahue, made a run for freedom at one of the gates but was overpowered.

Checkmated, the convicts started across the yards and at the corner of Cellhouse E ran into the squad led by the warden.

Morro Castle Was Not Hit by Lightning, Inquiry Learns.

Asbury Park, N. J., Sept. 10 (A.P.).—Fire Chief William Taggart tonight announced the finding of a charred body, believed to be that of Capt. Robert R. Willmott of the ill-fated liner, Morro Castle, in the master's quarters of the ship.

The ship's captain died of a heart attack, induced by acute indigestion, the night before the fire. Taggart said little remained of the body.

(Copyright, 1934, by The Associated Press.)

New York, Sept. 10.—Arsonists destroyed the Morro Castle, the Ward liner's officers testified today at a dramatic Federal inquiry into Saturday's disaster.

Declaring that on a previous cruise to Havana an attempt also had been made to fire the ship, Acting Captain and Chief Officer William F. Warms said that on Saturday:

"A library locker blew out soon after the smoke was reported by the watchman. I think somebody put something in that locker."

Warms declared it was not true, as stated by some survivors, that lightning struck the ship in a storm.

Supporting his superior's charge of incendiarism, Second Officer Clarence Hackney testified that "10 minutes after the fire was reported, there was a flash from the burning locker."

Communists Blamed.

The third officer, Irwin Freeman, saying a cigarette could not possibly have started the devastation, testified:

"I think the fire was set. I eliminate lightning striking the gasoline tanks because they are right beside my room and I passed within 2 feet of them and they were not afire. As for a time bomb or fire machine, they could not have gone on unnoticed for 48 hours under our systematic search."

These statements found an echo in Havana, where dock workers have been on a strike. Capt. Oscar Hernandez, chief of the port police, made the flat charge that the fire was set by Communists.

In Balboa, Canal Zone, authorities investigating a fire on the Grace liner, Santa Rita, blamed "the fire here and on the Morro Castle" on an organization of international radicals.

132 Dead and Missing.

As flames still seared through the hold of the famous cruiser ship, beached a few hundred feet from Asbury Park's boardwalk, the latest count of the dead and missing was 132. One hundred and sixteen bodies have been recovered.

Scarcely had the Federal inquiry got under way when United States Attorney Martin Conboy issued subpenas for appearances before the Federal grand jury tomorrow of Warms and other ship's officers and survivors.

The testimony at the hearing, conducted by Dickerson N. Hoover, head of the steamboat inspection service of the Department of Commerce, also brought out that the body of Capt. Robert Willmott, master of the liner, was cremated in his cabin.

Willmott died suddenly Friday night—but a few hours before the last night out of a Havana-to-New Officers' Testimony Points to Incendiarism in Fire on Morro Castle

York cruise was turned into horror and panic.

Warms said the master was laid out in his cabin, the door locked.

"I tried to get out the body of . . ." then Warms broke. He sobbed for a minute, added:

"He was my pal."

"I guess that's how I broke my hand. The fire was following me all the time.

"I couldn't get any farther, I couldn't * * *"

Crowds packed the small hearing room in the customs house throughout the day. Chief Officer Warms, obviously quite nervous, was the first witness.

Early in his testimony he declared his belief that the holocaust was the work of incendiarists. He said his belief was supported by an attempt on a previous voyage to set fire to the ship.

Warms—small of stature, with a bald head and piercing eyes—said the fire was first reported in the ship's library at 2:45 a. m. (E. S. T.).

"The deck watchman reported he had seen smoke and fire coming out of ventilators on the port side, amidships."

"What did you do then?" asked Capt. Carl Nielson, inspector of hulls for the Department of Commerce, who conducted the questioning.

"I told the lookout to turn out the crew and ordered the stewards and saloon watchman to waken the passengers and use the tin pans if necessary."

Warms said in the library smoke exuded from a locker room, that the locker "blew out" when Second Officer Hackney turned a fire extinguisher on it, and testified he believed there was fuel oil of some kind in the locker.

The chief officer was on the bridge all the time.

"Could you smell the fumes of any fuel oil on the bridge?" he was asked.

"No."

On the decks after passengers were aroused, the acting captain said he saw much panicky confusion. After the alarm was sounded, he said, the amidships seemed to go up in a puff.

Some passengers, he said, didn't seem to want to come out of their cabins.

"I understood there had been several drinking parties that night and also that they carried six or seven girls to their rooms who were very drunk."

After he had expressed every confidence in the crew of the liner, Warms was asked:

"What about reports that 70 or 80 of the 85 or so that landed in one lifeboat were members of the crew?"

"I don't know anything about that."

"Did the crew leave without helping passengers?"

"The boats were not lowered until I gave the orders," Warms replied.

"Where were you?"

"Was there any trouble?"

"I saw some panic among the passengers. I saw a steward force a woman into a lifeboat."

Warms Unable to Explain Failure Of Power System in Emergency

Then, Chief Officer Warms said some of the passengers didn't seem to want to enter the boats.

Warms said, as he walked around the bridge, he saw no one at the automatic fire control board.

Neither, he said, did the emergency electric light system work.

The questioning revolved for a large part around the failure of power.

"About 20 minutes after the fire was discovered," Warms said, "the chief engineer said the engine crew could not go on and all power had failed.

"He said it was so thick with smoke the crew could not remain. I told the first officer to go forward and get the anchor ready, we were without power.

"Was there any discontent in the engine room?" he was asked.

The bridge telephone to the engine room was cut off.

"When the chief engineer came up to the bridge, I told him 'for God's sake go forward and drop the anchor.'"

Warms said the first radio signal, asking ships to stand by, went out at 3:15 a. m. and that about a minute later the S O S was dispatched.

When asked by the investigators about the difference in time between the discovery of fire and the S O S signal, Warms said:

"I thought the crew could control the fire."

In the testimony of Clarence Hackney, second officer, and Irwin Freeman, third officer, it was brought out that the fire bulkheads cutting off the flames from nonburning sections of the ship were not lowered because the officers believed that would cut off some passengers from escape.

Hackney, describing the scene in the library when he went to investigate the watchman's report of fire, said he turned an extinguisher on the closet, from which smoke was pouring, and then there was an explosion. Here, he believed, the fire was set.

While early reports of survivors said the blaze might have been started by late-drinkers in the salon dropping a cigarette, Hackney strongly denied such could have started the quickly raging fire.

After eliminating lightning as a cause, Hackney was asked:

"Then you think the fire was set on board?"

"For these reasons I do.

"In the first place, I eliminate lightning striking the gasoline tanks because they are right by my room and I passed frequently within two feet of them and they were not afire.

"As for a time bomb or fire machine, they could not have gone unnoticed for 48 hours under our systematic ship search."

Tells of Fire on Previous Voyage, Believed to Have Been Incendiary

At the request of the examiners, Freeman amplified the declaration of acting Capt. Warms that a fire was set on another voyage.

Last August 27, he said, a watchman found a small fire in the cargo. It was quickly put out. Charred newspapers, Freeman said, were found in the cargo.

"Then," Hoover asked, "you believe that fire was incendiary?"

"I can't imagine," Freeman replied, "how a cigarette could possibly have been blown from the deck, down a companionway, around two right-angle turns and over an 8-foot fire screen to reach the cargo."

Freeman was asked by Hoover:

"Did you have any labor trouble?"

"No, sir."

"How about in Havana on the dock?" (In reference to the strike of dockworkers.)

"Oh, there is always some trouble there." Freeman added he believed neither fire could possibly have been set by labor agitators on the dock.

Again the testimony got around to the lifeboats.

Hackney said he personally had received no orders from his immediate superior to lower them.

"There was nothing to do but to lower the boats," he said.

Hoover questioned Hackney as to why so many of the crew got away in boats without passengers to fill them.

"Not many passengers," Hackney replied, "could get where the boats were."

Hoover interrupted again:

"Couldn't the crew have led the passengers around some other way besides the amidship stairway to reach the boats on the upper deck?"

"I guess so," Hackney said.

Although Hackney was in the library room when the locker "blew out," he, like Warms up on the bridge, said he smelled no fumes of gasoline or fuel oil that might have been used to set the fire in the locker.

Just before he left the witness chair, Hackney said there was little discipline in the crew at the time of the fire.

"There could be no organized discipline under such conditions," he said.

Frequently during the sessions today, Hoover was forced to quiet the furious that crowded the small room overlooking the Bowling Green down by Battery Park.

Once, Hoover shouted:

"Keep quiet. I can't even hear myself."

At further sessions of the hearing tomorrow, Hoover will question others of the surviving officers and crew, who remained aboard the once luxurious liner after it was taken into tow by the Coast Guard cutter Tampa and beached.

As the hearing progressed, Representative William Sutphin, of New Jersey, telegraphed the steamboat inspection service that he had information leading him to believe the crew of the Morro Castle was "new and undisciplined."

"Information in my possession," he messaged, "leads me to believe the crew was new and undisciplined and that this line hired the crew just before the day of the sailing, dismissing the crew after each trip and engaging another crew before sailing again."

Salvaging operations aboard the liner at Asbury Park were interrupted when, as firemen leveled steady streams of water into her hold, there were two explosions. The fire flared higher in the hold after each.

No more bodies were taken from the ship by those who boarded by breeches buoy before the explosions. Two were taken off yesterday and it was felt some of those still unaccounted for have been cremated—suffocated in their cabins by the dense smoke or trapped by walls of fire.

The central morgue set up late last night in Jersey City was visited throughout the day by families and friends of the missing. All bodies from the Jersey coast towns were brought to Jersey City.

Santa Rita Fire Inquiry Starts; Reds Blamed

Morro Castle Disaster Laid to Same Group by Ship Officers.

Balboa, Canal Zone, Sept. 10 (AP). The fire authorities of the Canal Zone tonight began an investigation of the fire of the Grace liner Santa Rita while officers of the vessel blamed "the fire here and also on the Morro Castle" on an international radical organization.

The Santa Rita made port today with a fire in her hold, a fire that was discovered last Friday off the coast of Colombia and which the crew had fought more than 48 hours.

Capt. Stevenson brought his ship with its fiery cargo into port safely. For the last 50 miles of the trip he was accompanied by a detachment of Canal Zone firemen who had steamed out to sea on the tug Favorite with 70 tons of fire-fighting chemicals in order to quench the blaze in the cargo of cotton, nitrates, wool and coffee.

Officers Report Radicalism.

Some of the officers on the Santa Rita said they had been troubled by radical elements in the crew and that on July 23 the Grace Line had sent a circular message to all vessels asking the formation of "The Grace Line Marine Association." The company, they said, had asked its formation in order to obtain closer cooperation between the ship's personnel and the owners.

The officers, they said, voted "no," and the men voted "yes."

"We are more than willing," these officers said, "to cooperate with the owners and we always have been, but we are unwilling to cooperate with the radical elements of the crew. If the association were formed, the crew would have an equal voice in the affairs of the ship, according to the suggestion from the main office and which we are unwilling to concede.

"Aboard every ship is a member of 'this radical organization' who had plenty of opportunity to start the fire from the time the cargo was loaded until the hatches were apparently closed.

More Ship Fires Forecast.

"The radicals of the crew are most antagonistic to the owners and you will see more fires aboard ships very soon."

It was revealed today that the crew of the Santa Isabel, another Grace liner, threw its boatswain overboard some time ago when the liner was docked at Balboa, demanding the right to elect its own boatswain. The captain, however, refused their request.

In the Santa Rita's fight against fire, a steward, the second officer, and the assistant purser were overcome by smoke, but were resuscitated. One of the 65 passengers discovered the blaze at 6:40 p. m. Friday. A stowaway was rescued from a hold by sailors who heard his frantic knocks.

Girls Recovering From Poison Doses

Two girls are recovering in Providence Hospital from effects of poison they are alleged to have swallowed early yesterday while visiting a Bladensburg dance pavilion.

The girls, Miss Mary Cline and Mrs. Olive Davis, both 19, of the 300 block of South Capitol street, were brought to the hospital by a visitor to the dance place who said "they appeared sick and in need of medical attention."

"We were just disgusted," the young women were reported to have told hospital attendants. Mrs. Davis said her husband was in Ohio, but Miss Cline declined to reveal identity of her relatives.

Ship Survivors Claim Bodies In Mortuary on Ocean's Shore

Hearses Move Slowly From Seagirt; Sailors Find Three Comrades.

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 10 (AP).—One by one hearses slowly rolled away today from a frame mortuary in which lay the last of the bodies of Morro Castle victims.

By dusk only a score of the 47 bodies brought by special train from the National Guard camp at Seagirt remained. The others had been identified by sorrowing relatives and taken away to other communities for burial.

A silent, orderly crowd lined the side street on which the mortuary stands. Occasionally it fell back as men or women, many with handkerchiefs to their faces, stepped from automobiles and quickly entered the building.

In midafternoon four members of the Morro Castle crew, looking wan and tired, shuffled up. They waited in the yard for a few minutes, plucking at leaves of a low hedge.

Then they walked inside. At each cot they stopped as an attendant lifted a sheet. They identified one of their comrades, then another, and finally a third.

Later a woman drove up, but alighted on the other side of the street. For some time she looked intently at the building, as if mustering courage to enter.

Then she walked firmly across the road, through the yard and past the door. To the attendant she murmured:

"I'm looking for my husband, Sidney Ryan. He was second steward on the liner."

"There he is," she cried. A moment later she walked out, weeping quietly.

secret police, revealed that he was assisting the Treasury Department in pushing the investigation at this end of its route. Chief Fraga assigned three detectives to investigate all angles of the sabotage theory.

Charles Pemberton, chief of the customs police, also joined the investigation, and Gabriel Landa, secretary of the treasury, said he was assigning the customs department to clean up the mystery.

In his summing up of his theory regarding the burning of the Morro Castle, Capt. Hernandez stated:

"The Morro Castle fire seems to have been the work of Communists, apparently of a passenger who boarded the ship with fire-making chemicals in his baggage. * * *

"Couldn't Be Accidental."

"I believe the Morro Castle fire could not possibly have been accidental. It was intentional and I believe it was the work of Communists and terrorists who are being directed by the Caribbean Bureau of the Third Internationale.

"I believe it to have been the work of a passenger and not a member of the crew. If it had been one of the crew, the fire would have started below decks. The ship was built to prevent fire from spreading from below decks to the superstructure.

"The fact that the fire started when the ship was only a short distance from the New Jersey Coast also indicate that it was incendiary because the culprit could have donned a lifebelt and jumped overboard to a launch lurking nearby by previous arrangement."

Charles R. Cameron, United States Consul General, said he had received no instructions to take any action on the matter.

Washington Bowie, jr., May 27, in which collision, Leon Carder, Hagerstown, was killed, Harry A. Gen. Bowie, returning from Camp Ritchie where he was stationed with Maryland National Guardsmen, was unhurt.

Johnson, NRA Fate Up at Conferences

The meeting was arranged two weeks ago when Gen. Johnson, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Donald R. Richberg, NRA general counsel, clashed violently in a discussion at the White House. At the time it appeared that the President was giving his industrial administrator time to "cool off" before attempting to compose the differences.

Since then the President has reaffirmed that Gen. Johnson will continue as administrator, although belief has prevailed that ultimately Mr. Richberg and Miss Perkins will have their way. As explained by Mr. Roosevelt, reorganization of the NRA will be undertaken step by step, leading up to the adoption of a more permanent program for submission to Congress.

Leaves Early Today.

Gen. Johnson, cutting his visit somewhat shorter than expected, will leave Hyde Park early tomorrow morning by the same plane that bore him here. Miss Robinson is expected to accompany him back to the Capital.

Except for the Johnson conference, the President spent today engaged in routine work, which consisted chiefly of catching up with his correspondence. This was broken by a telephone call from Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., informing him that the response to the Treasury's refinancing program was "highly satisfactory."

So far as could be learned, the meeting with the recovery administrator will be the President's only engagement on the NRA until he returns to Washington, which is now set for the last of this month. Mr. Richberg had been expected to pay a visit, but the "summer White House" said no appointment has been made.

The President will see a host of other visitors this week, however, before leaving Friday to join the spectators at the International Yacht Races off Newport, R. I. Among tomorrow's callers will be Myron C. Taylor, chairman of U. S. Steel Corporation; Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, and Postmaster General James A. Farley. They are all down for luncheon.

Others on the appointment list are Nathan Straus, jr., New York; William N. Niles, who succeeded the President as chairman of the Taconic State Park Commission; Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College at Winter Haven, Fla., and J. C. Penney, the chain store executive, who lives only a few miles from Hyde Park House.

Plans for the President's trip to Newport are still indefinite, beyond the fact that he will board Vincent Astor's yacht Nourmahal here on Friday. He is expected to spend several days watching the races before returning to Hyde Park.

Leaders Defend Auto Owners On Relief Roll

case called to our attention, by Mr. Lusk or any one else."

"We know a large number of our clients own automobiles," Elwood Street, director of welfare said. "We employ a considerable number of them on work relief, transporting case workers and doing other work in which automobiles are required.

"Their automobiles are an asset which we wish to conserve for them because it enables them to get additional work. We give them only one-half the rent. They have to dig up jobs to meet the rest of their expenses. A car nowadays is like the tools of a skilled artisan. In some cases friends of clients transport them to save them car fare. Because a man is poor doesn't mean he hasn't any friends.

"In other instances clients club together and use taxicabs because they are cheaper than street cars. Some have friends who drive taxis. The poor do help the poor.

22,000 Families on Roll.

"It is quite possible Mr. Lusk has observed chiselers. We are trying to get rid of them. We have 22,000 families, representing 85,000 persons, on our rolls. No doubt some are dishonest. The poor probably are no more honest than other groups.

"We will be glad to have Mr. Lusk's list and we will check every case. We want the public to feel we are performing a public service with a feeling of public responsibility. We want the public to feel the money we distribute is going to those who should get it. We invite every citizen to help us detect dishonest persons.

"It should be borne in mind, however, that it is much better to make a mistake in the case of a relatively few of such cases than to deny relief to all until a thorough and exhaustive investigation has been made in every case. The detection would cost much more than is lost through the few dishonest."

School Vaccination Clinics Continued

Will Remain Open Until September 22.

Special vaccination clinics for children seeking to enter public schools will be continued until September 22, Dr. J. A. Murphy, chief medical and sanitary inspector of public schools, announced yesterday.

The clinic for white children will be held at the Webster School, Tenth and H streets northwest, from 10 a. m. to noon daily. That for colored children will be held in the Terrell Junior High School on M street between First street and New Jersey avenue northwest, from 10 a. m. to noon daily. Erroneous announcement that the clinics would be open daily until 2 p. m. has caused inconvenience and confusion among parents, Dr. Murphy said.

Vaccination of all children entering schools is required, Dr. Murphy said, but pointed out that children may be vaccinated by private physicians.

Esperanto Session Tonight.

The Washington Chapter of the Esperanto Association of North America will meet tonight in the Mount Pleasant Public Library, Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest. Plans will be discussed for participation in the coming Hallow'en parade.

Ship Violation Of U. S. Laws Sought in Quiz

Asbury Park, N. J., Sept. 10 (AP). Martin Conboy, U. S. District Attorney of New York, viewed the fire-swept Morro Castle from Convention Hall promenade late today and then conferred with Coast Guard officials and customs agents.

The Federal District attorney, heading one of three inquiries into the disaster, was accompanied here by Chief Operator George O'Keefe and special agent John Mullins, specialists in criminal investigation for the customs service.

Commander Simon R. Sands and Acting Commandant R. W. Hodge of the Coast Guard joined the District attorney's party for the conference.

"I am just down here continuing my investigation," Conboy said later, "examining Coast Guardsmen and others to find out the facts about conditions on board at the time of the fire."

Two Explosions on Ship.

He added he was interested in whether there had been any violation of a Federal statute in New York harbor, but declined to state whether he was specifically interested in any phase of the ship's condition on its last departure from New York for Havana.

"I am merely seeking information without trying to rationalize it," he said. "My mind is without preconceived opinions. I have no prejudice in the case."

Two explosions, apparently near the second stack and in the boiler room, gave rise to fear this morning that fuel oil, in the vessel's huge reservoirs, might become ignited by the flames still raging fiercely in the hold.

Capt. William A. Hall, Ward Line representative, after inspecting the tanks, declared, however, that there was no danger of a blast from that source.

Captain's Body Burned.

Braving the scorching heat, Capt. Hall crept forward to peer into the cabin of the late Capt. Robert R. Willmott, who died a few hours before the blaze was discovered.

"I could see no trace of the captain's body," Hall said later. "Everything inflammable in the room had been burned. It was like an oven."

Asbury Park firemen continued flooding the hold with water during the day. Two pumps, through five hose lines, fed 2,000 gallons a minute into the vessel's interior.

Fire Chief William Taggert withdrew his crew tonight, however, but said operations would be resumed in the morning. He said the firefighters had been able to explore the sun and promenade decks and two decks directly below these from stem to stern.

"We came across no traces of bodies," he declared. "The cabins have been utterly demolished, partitions have been reduced to ashes, and steel girders and beams have been gnarled and twisted by heat until it is no longer possible to tell where most of them originally rested."

Cargo's Nature Unknown.

The nature of the ship's cargo, rapidly being consumed by the flames, could not be authoritatively settled. F. A. Martin, a New York Marine insurance surveyor, scouted reports that she had carried a large consignment of gold. He expressed the opinion that sugar and hides constituted the major portion of the cargo.

The city observed official mourning for the dead in the disaster. Flags flew at half staff from most of the resort hotels, which would already have finished their seasons except for the visit of the stranded liner.

Street vendors, concessionaires and barkers continue to ply their wares. Hawkers sold postcard pictures of the beached ship, field glasses were for rent and wheelchair operators offered patrons vantage points for viewing the smoking vessel.

The Asbury Park city council moved tentatively to purchase the Morro Castle hulk and discussed plans for converting it into a museum. City Manager Bischoff said he had been authorized to negotiate for the purchase or leasing of the ship.

Hitler Admits Minority Rules In Nazi Regime

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 10 (AP). Adolf Hitler frankly admitted here tonight that his National Socialist government is government by the minority.

Behind that minority, however, stands the majority of the German people, Der Fuehrer asserted.

He was addressing the closing session of the party's sixth annual convention—a convention that saw the Nazi's mass ovation to Hitler rise to new heights of fervor.

So live and labor, he told his faithful, that "all decent Germans may become National Socialists" and "the best of the National Socialists may become party members."

He compared National Socialism to a religious order, asserting that as such it would always contain the elite minority of the nation.

"Our party will be unchangeable in its doctrine, hard as steel in its organization, pliable and adaptable in its tactics, but like an order in its entirety," Hitler said.

Henceforth, he added, the strictest standards of selection will be applied in the choice of new members.

"Of active party members more must always be demanded than of the ordinary citizens," he declared.

The wave of emotional adulation that has swirled about Hitler during the seven days of the convention reached its crest tonight.

About 200,000 brownshirted Nazis gathered enthusiastically with their leader in the vast bowl of Zeppelin Meadow to witness and cheer a war-like exhibition by various picked detachments of the Reichswehr (regular army).

The exhibition they saw was of setting-up exercises, the operation of the intelligence service, cavalry maneuvers, hand battles and various types of military sport.

Douglas Declines To Run for House

Refuses Offer of 'Write-in' in Arizona Primary.

Lewis W. Douglas, recently resigned Director of the Budget, said in a statement yesterday he felt it would be unwise for his Arizona friends to ask voters to write his name on the ballot for Representative in today's primary in that State, the Associated Press reported.

"I am grateful," he said, "for the friendly loyalty which prompts such a thought, but for many reasons it appears to me to be unwise at this time to follow this procedure."

Douglas was Arizona's lone Representative before he became budget director. He was succeeded by Mrs. Isabella Greenway, a close friend of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Arizona Vote To Fix Fate of Ashurst, Hunt

Veterans of Politics Face Test in Primary Election Today.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 10 (AP).—The fate of two veterans in Arizona politics will be at stake in the State primary tomorrow.

Henry F. Ashurst, Arizona's Senator since the State was admitted to the Union in 1912, has four opponents for the Democratic nomination. He is seeking a fifth term.

George W. P. Hunt, seven times Governor, seeks the Democratic nomination for an eighth term. Gov. B. B. Moeur, who gave Hunt his first defeat in the primary election two years ago, also seeks renomination.

Opposed to Ashurst in the Democratic primary are Sidney P. Osborn, Arizona's collector of internal revenue and until recently chairman of the Democratic State central committee; William Coxon, who contested unsuccessfully two years ago for Arizona's seat in the House of Representatives; Renz L. Jennings, Maricopa County attorney, and Charles P. Rutherford, Phoenix attorney, who several times in the past has aspired for the United States House or Senate.

Contest for House Seat.

For Congress, Isabella Greenway, elected in a special election last year to succeed Lewis W. Douglas, is opposed by Frank H. Hilgeman, Salt River Valley farmer. Douglas quit the Congressional post to become Director of the Budget. He resigned from that position recently.

Douglas, becoming cognizant in Washington of a movement among his friends in Arizona to write his name in on the primary ballot in opposition to Mrs. Greenway, advised against it.

"For many reasons it appears to me to be unwise at this time to follow this procedure," Douglas said.

Opposing Moeur and Hunt in the primary are James Minotta, chairman of the Senate appropriations committee in the Eleventh Legislature and R. C. Stanford, Phoenix attorney and former superior court judge.

Candidates for all other State offices also are to be nominated.

In Republican Primaries.

Republicans have several names on the primary ballot—George L. Burgess for United States Senator, Eva Robinette for Congress, J. H. Kinney for Governor, E. P. Carr for secretary of state and Francis Ryley for attorney general—but the Republican State central committee has allowed it to be known these are expected to withdraw after the primary and allow the Republican ticket to be named by the convention method.

Maine Vote Heavy In New Deal Test

the Union," the interpretation of Brann's victory or defeat was one to be determined largely by political viewpoint. His failure to make a militant defense of the "New Deal," a matter which he left for the candidates for National office, raised the question of whether a victory would substantiate the contention that it was the approval of the "New Deal." His defeat would indicate a return of Maine solidly to the G. O. P. and unquestioned disapproval of the "New Deal."

Other figures in the contests besides Brann and Ames were:

For United States Senator—Frederick Hale, Republican, seeking return to the Senate where he has sat for 18 years. A wealthy bachelor, he is the son of a former Senator and member of a family whose name has long been symbolic of Maine Republicanism. A foe of all things tinged with the Rooseveltian colors, Hale carried that opposition into the campaign and in return was criticized by Democrats as one who did not have the interests of the common people at heart.

Opponent a New Dealer.

Hale's opponent, F. Harold Dubord, former Mayor of Waterville and Democratic State committeeman from Maine, campaigned aggressively throughout the State. Dubord was the chief standard bearer in the defense of the "New Deal" and President Roosevelt. He attacked Hale's record, citing daily the Republican Senator's votes in opposition to "New Deal" measures.

For Congress—In the First District Representative Carroll L. Beedy (Republican) was opposed by Simon Hamlin, former school teacher, former Mayor of South Portland and a "dirt" farmer. Beedy probably was the most vitriolic of all the Republican orators in his denunciation of the New Deal. Campaigning more for his colleagues than himself, he insisted that Ames be elected as a demonstration of Maine's refusal to indorse the Federal Administration.

Moran's Chances Strong.

In the Second District Representative Edward C. Moran (Democrat), who swept into office two years ago with Gov. Brann, was opposed by Judge Zelma Dwindal (Republican). In the home district of Gov. Brann, Democrats expected Moran would benefit greatly by an expression of strength for Brann.

The Third District fight, in the northeastern section of the State, along the Canadian border, in the Aroostook potato area and Penobscot County, Representative John G. Utterback (Democrat) fought against relinquishing his seat to former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster (Republican). Two years ago this pair fought the same battle, with Utterback receiving full rights to his seat only a short time before the last Congress adjourned, when that body seated him over Brewster's protests. The latter claimed fraud in the Canadian border towns.

5,000 on Guard In New Orleans For Vote Today

Quiet Day Is in Prospect, However, With Walmsley, Long in Truce.

New Orleans, Sept. 10 (AP).—New Orleans will go to the polls tomorrow under the threat of almost 5,000 guns to chose between the "dictatorship" of Senator Huey P. Long and the rule of the old regulars of the city, captained by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

With 2,000 members of the Louisiana National Guard in New Orleans, opposed by Walmsley's reinforced city police of about the same number, the rest of the State prepared for a quiet primary.

Under a peace pact agreed upon by the Long and Walmsley factions, no guardsmen or policemen will be allowed at the polls.

Any election disputes will be handled by an arbitration committee commanding a flying squadron of 300 armed men.

After almost two months of constant turmoil, carrying a threat of pitched battles on the streets of New Orleans, the election-eve docility promised one of the most peaceful ballotings in the city's history.

Uneasy over the great store of armaments in the city, Dean William D. Nes, of Christ Church Cathedral, Episcopal, ordered a special Holy Communion service held to pray for an honest and peaceful election.

Parents, sweethearts and wives of militiamen throughout the State added their prayers. Considerable criticism was directed against Long for calling numerous high school boys to arms.

Both Long and Walmsley, who have completely overshadowed the personalities of the candidates they are supporting, expressed confidence over the outcome of the primary.

Two Representatives, a State supreme court justice and a member of the State public service commission will be nominated in the New Orleans district. Representatives will be nominated also in all other districts of the State.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.). Funeral services for Edward T. England, 65, former attorney general of West Virginia and one-time member of the House of Representatives, will be held here tomorrow afternoon. Anniversary Observed By Manassas U. D. C.

Manassas, Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.).—The Prince William Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy celebrated its fortieth anniversary yesterday at the home of Mrs. M. M. Washington, of Greenwich.

The six surviving charter members were present. Mrs. Elisha Meredith, wife of the late Representative Meredith, and the first president of the chapter, cut the birthday cake.

Veteran's Widow, 92, Will be Buried Today

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.). Funeral services for Mrs. Amanda McCauley, 92, widow of a Confederate veteran and one of the oldest residents of East Rockingham, will be held tomorrow at Mount Olive Church, near Lynnwood.

Mrs. McCauley fell and broke her hip six weeks ago and this accident hastened her death. Seven children survive.

Garner Is Chosen As Committeeman; Ferguson Resigns

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 10 (AP). Former Gov. James E. Ferguson resigned today as National Democratic committeeman from Texas, and the State Democratic executive committee immediately adopted a motion notifying Vice President John N. Garner of his election to the committee.

Ferguson said he resigned in the interests of party harmony and made his resignation contingent upon the acceptance of the post by Vice President Garner. Garner has said he could not refuse the honor if it were offered him.

The executive committee's action might be brought before the Democratic State convention here tomorrow for endorsement or rejection, but this was not regarded as likely.

Election of Garner set a precedent in American politics in that no other Vice President has held such a position. However, United States Senators have served as committeemen.

Blease and Foe End Appeal for Carolina Votes

Run-Off Primary Winner Certain to Be Governor; Issues Are Lacking.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 10 (AP).—Cole L. Blease, iron-gray veteran of more than a score of political battles, and Olin D. Johnston, 38-year-old attorney, made their final appeals tonight as South Carolina Democrats prepared to choose between them in tomorrow's run-off primary for Governor. Nomination is equivalent to election.

Johnston, runner-up four years ago to Gov. Ibra C. Blackwood, led the field of eight in the first primary August 28, with Blease in second place, about 17,000 votes behind.

No clear-cut issues developed in the first primary or in the last two weeks, which both candidates utilized for intensive vote seeking.

Each advocated economy in State finances and each agreed to be governed with regard to the legalization of liquor by the nonbinding referendum held in connection with the first primary. The wets carried that by about 23,000 majority.

Johnston poured a fire of criticism against the State highway department and advocated a $3 flat license fee for passenger automobiles. He made a definite promise to veto any general sales tax bill.

Blease, who was Governor for two terms a score of years ago and later served a term in the United States Senate, based his appeal for support principally upon his public record.

The polls open at 8 a. m. and close at 4 p. m., except in the larger cities and a few other precincts, where they will be open until 6 p. m. The enrollment is 375,000.

One other State race is to be decided. Joseph R. Bryson, of Greenville, and J. Emil Harley, of Barnwell, are opposing each other for Lieutenant Governor.

New Deal Issue In Washington State's Voting

Senate and Six House Nominees Will Be Selected Today.

Seattle, Sept. 10 (AP).—Republican attacks on the New Deal and individual battles within the Democratic party marked the primary election campaign which ended in Washington State today. Tomorrow the voters will choose nominees for United States Senator, six Congressional seats and many State offices.

Highlighting the campaign was the acrimonious battle between Lewis Schwellenbach, Seattle attorney and New Deal supporter, and John C. Stevenson, King County commissioner, for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Dill Backs Leavy.

Senator C. C. Dill, Democrat, who is retiring, indorsed the candidacy of Superior Judge Charles H. Leavy, of Spokane. Dr. Harry Deegan, of Shelton; John C. Peterson, Seattle salesman, and James W. Williams, Spokane real estate man, also seek the senatorial nomination.

Republican aspirants to the senatorial nomination who attacked the New Deal as a threat against "American Constitutional rights" were Ralph A. Horr, Seattle, former Representative; Reno Odlin, Olympia banker; Frank Goodwin, Seattle executive, who says "there are too many lawyers in Congress now;" D. V. Morthland, Yakima attorney, and Frank R. Jeffrey, Seattle lawyer.

Sam B. Hill Unopposed.

Six Democratic Representatives seek renomination, and five of them have to fight for it. The veteran, Sam B. Hill, of Waterville, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, has no Democratic opposition. The other incumbents are Marion A. Zioncheck, Seattle; Knute Hill, Prosser; Mon C. Wallgren, Everett; Martin F. Smith, Hoquiam, and Wesley Lloyd, Tacoma.

Stevenson, saying he had fought the battle of "the masses" against "special privilege," attacked Schwellenbach as a "tool of the interests." The latter said Stevenson as King County commissioner broke his promises.

Washington State voters do not register by parties, but they must ask for either Democratic or Republican ballots at primary elections. The polls will open tomorrow at 8 a. m. and close at 8 p. m. (Pacific Coast time).

Woman Rival, Governor Wait Colorado Vote

Primary Today Will Name Democracy's Standard Bearer in November.

Denver, Sept. 10 (AP).—Colorado's two Democratic candidates for Governor rested tonight from a hard campaign and awaited the primary election tomorrow to determine whether a man or woman will carry Democracy's banner in the November hustings.

Miss Josephine Roche, coal magnate and nationally known social worker, closed her campaign tonight with a broadcast address, while her opponent, Gov. Edwin C. Johnson, spoke at a mass meeting in Colorado Springs.

Holding to his record as his platform, Gov. Johnson asked his renomination on the ground that he has earned it.

Miss Roche, refusing to concede that Johnson's record of two years office has entitled him to further service, described her own election as the only way for Colorado to "get in step" with the National Administration.

Supports of each, in the bitterest Democratic primary within memory here, predicted landslides for their candidates.

Miss Roche has been assailed by Johnson and his supporters as a radical, a label she has accepted with the comment that "if I am a radical, so then is the President and all who are seeking to alleviate the suffering of the common man."

Although Johnson is a lifelong labor union member, Miss Roche received unanimous support of the State labor convention for her work in unionizing her own mines in northern Colorado. She has campaigned strenuously for a tax on wealth to care for the old and the needy and to insure employment.

Johnson, a working man throughout his life, on the other hand, has declared her plan would cost the State $200,000,000 annually and characterized it as the "wildest scheme ever seriously proposed in Colorado."

The Democratic primary contests for all State offices save three were pushed into the background in the heat of the gubernatorial race and there were no contests for the Republican nominations.

School Mark Set In Anne Arundel

Enrollment of 13,000 Is Expected.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 10 (Spl.). All records for attendance at public schools in Anne Arundel County were broken today when sessions were resumed.

An enrollment exceeding 13,000 is indicated, George Fox, county superintendent, said. The highest previous mark, 11,900, was set last year. More than 2,000 will be high school pupils, about half of whom will be in Annapolis High, the others being scattered among Glenburnie, Millersville, and Southern High, at Traceys Landing.

When St. John's College reopens September 26, and the Naval Academy two days later, approximately 15,000 students will be under instruction in the Annapolis and Anne Arundel County area. St. John's anticipates an enrollment approaching 225, and the roster of four classes of midshipmen at the Naval Academy will be 1,703. In addition about 200 young men will be prepping at local preparatory schools for the academy.

Customs Men Deny Smuggling.

Seattle, Sept. 10 (AP).—George D. Hubbard, former United States Customs collector here, and two of his aids, Howard R. Crow, of Bellingham, and Perry V. Wilcox, of Seattle, pleaded not guilty today when arraigned in Federal Court on charges of conspiring to smuggle liquor into the United States from Canada.

Governor Race Holds Interest For Michigan

Light Balloting Expected as State Votes Today on Local Issues.

Detroit, Sept. 10 (AP).—A primary election campaign, in which the issues have been largely local and public interest seemingly at the lowest level in more than a decade, closed tonight, with election officials expecting approximately 600,000 voters to go to the polls. In the primary of 1932 the aggregate vote was 1,047,117, and in November of the same year 1,616,262 votes were counted.

While both major parties are to name candidates for Senator and Representatives in each of the 17 Congressional districts, the contests for the gubernatorial nomination on both Republican and Democratic tickets have attracted most of the relatively little interest in the campaign.

Four in Contest.

For the Republican nomination for Governor, Alex J. Groesbeck, three times Governor, is opposed by Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of State; John W. Smith, former Mayor of Detroit, and Orla A. Bailey, a Shiawasse County farmer. Fitzgerald holds the distinction of being the only Republican seeking reelection on the State ticket two years ago to survive the Democratic landslide.

On the Democratic gubernatorial ticket, Gov. William A. Comstock, who took an active part in framing the National platform in Chicago two years ago, is opposed by Arthur J. Lacy, Detroit attorney, and John K. Stack, jr., of Escanaba, State auditor general. Lacy has asserted he entered the race "to save Michigan for the National Administration." Comstock has retorted that "nobody is riding on Roosevelt's coattails in this primary."

Vandenberg Unopposed.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg is unopposed for renomination on the Republican ticket, while four Democrats are seeking the right to oppose him in the November election. They are Frank A. Pickard, of Saginaw, chairman of the State liquor commission; Claude S. Carney, Kalamazoo attorney; Alva M. Cummins, Lansing lawyer, and Ray D. Schneider, auditor of Wayne County (Detroit). The first three are veterans of many years of political battling.

In the Congressional contests, all of Michigan's present delegation are seeking renomination, and the following are without opposition: J. C. Lehr (Democrat), Second District; Michael J. Hart (Democrat), Eighth; Prentiss M. Brown (Democrat), Eleventh; Roy O. Woodruff (Republican), Tenth; W. Frank James (Republican), Twelfth. All told, 142 candidates are seeking Democratic or Republican Congressional nominations.

National Sessions Opened by Red Men

Mayor Welcomes Delegates to Baltimore.

Baltimore, Sept. 10 (Spl.).—Members of the Improved Order of Red Men from throughout the United States opened business sessions of their annual convention here today.

The meeting was called to order by Worthington P. Wachter, of Hagerstown, grand incohonee, and the delegates were welcomed by Mayor Jackson.

Principal speaker at the session today was W. G. Cox, overseer of a textile mill at Anderson, S. C., whose home is Honea Path, S. C., the scene of recent encounters between militia and strikers. Mr. Cox deplored the violence which has accompanied the strike and said, in his opinion, the walkout will be ineffectual and temporary.

Sessions of the Red Men will continue tomorrow with the National election slated for Wednesday.

New Arlington Term Is Begun; 5,352 Enrolled

Superintendent Expects More Than 6,000 to Matriculate.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The public schools of the county opened yesterday with an enrollment of 5,352, an increase of 119 over last year. The enrollment at the Washington-Lee High School was 1,900 against 1,728 last year. In the elementary schools the enrollment was 3,452 against 3,453.

Enrollment by schools follows: James Monroe, 276; Cherrydale, 312; Lyon Park, 375; Ballston, 372; Nellie Custis, 276; Clarendon, 213; Patrick Henry, 327; Woodrow Wilson, 132; Stonewall Jackson, 193; Barcroft, 88; John Marshall, 120; Robert E. Lee, 110; Woodmont, 36; Saegmuller, 29; Hume, 52; Glencarlyn, 35; Jefferson Colored School, 222; Langston Colored School, 114 and Kemper Colored School, 170.

Superintendent Fletcher Kemp said indications are that the enrollment will far exceed 6,000.

In an effort for better protection of school children Sheriff Howard B. Fields assigned officers to the following buildings to direct traffic at opening and closing of schools:

Washington-Lee, James D. East; Cherrydale, Vernon Wilt; Ballston, Harold Mason; Clarendon, Edward Duncan; Woodrow Wilson, Archie Richards; Nellie Custis, Ray Cobean; Patrick Henry, Ernest Miller; Langston, Jack Conway; St. Charles Catholic, Hugh Jones and John Marshall, Norman Carson.

The following officers have been assigned to night duty: John R. Burke, H. M. Brown, Lewis Elliott and Joseph Marcey.

The enrollment at St. Charles Catholic School at Clarendon, which opened yesterday, was reported as 225.

Lee Road Plans Progress.

Rapid progress being made in obtaining rights of way, engineers indicate probable construction of the Lee boulevard approach to the Arlington Memorial Bridge before the end of this year, according to a statement by Chairman H. G. Shirley of the Virginia Highway Commission yesterday.

Shirley said last reports from the engineers indicated they were making rapid progress and the completion of the road now seems practically assured.

Construction will start as soon as the full rights of way have been secured, Shirley said. As it will only be about two miles long, he sees no reason why there will not be a direct connection between the bridge and the Lee highway at a point slightly south of Falls Church before the end of the year.

The estimated cost of the road, which will be 60 feet in width, is $200,000, all of which will be furnished by the Federal funds apportioned to the State.

Three Roads Will Reopen.

Wilson boulevard extension to the Arlington Memorial Bridge, Washington avenue extension to the bridge and Harlow avenue in Rosslyn, which have been closed for the past two days while receiving surface treatment, will be open to traffic tomorrow night, County Manager Roy S. Braden announced.

On completing these projects the contractors, Carson & Gruman, of Washington, will proceed to other sections of the county, where a number of roads have been prepared for treatment.

The total expenditure by the county for this work is said to be approximately $10,000.

Students Show Up A Day Too Early

13,000 to Return Today in Prince Georges.

Approximately 13,000 Prince Georges County school children will renew their acquaintance with "reading, writing, and 'rithmetic," today as the 114 county schools open for the 1934-35 session.

Many self-termed "unfortunates" confused the date of the opening and were on hand yesterday morning at the various county schools.

However, as far as the teachers were concerned, the schools did open yesterday. The several hundred teachers were called together at Eastern High School, Washington, for a pre-school meeting.

Tuxedo Slaying Probers Fail To Trace Notes

Diary Makes No Mention of Loor; Mrs. Pyles and Son Buried.

Prince Georges County officials were admittedly puzzled last night over the handwriting of the notes found on the body of Mrs. Lulu Pyles, at Tuxedo, Md., last Friday.

County Policeman Arthur Brown, assigned to investigate the case, declared there was "a lot about the case that can not be made public just now."

O'Neill said that Elmer F. Pyles, described by police as the estranged husband of the dead woman, had been traced through a diary kept by Mrs. Pyles. The diary notes meetings with Pyles between last February and April but does not mention Ernest Loor, he said.

Police, however, in no way connect Pyles with the shooting, which occurred in a lonely bush retreat near a spur of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The body of Mrs. Pyles was found lying beside her 2-year-old boy, Vernon, when police were led to the spot by Loor. The infant died the next day.

Both had been shot with a revolver, allegedly the one turned over to police by Loor, who had also received one of the bullets in his hip. Loor said the woman shot him and the baby and committed suicide.

Two of the notes found on Mrs. Pyles directed the finder to notify Mrs. David Dudley, who lived within a quarter of a mile from the scene and with whom Mrs. Pyles had been staying. The third said "I asked Ernest to go with him."

Funeral services for Mrs. Pyles and her son were held yesterday at the Dudley home. Interment was in Bladensburg Cemetery.

Traffic Deaths Rise in August

Seven persons were killed and 290 injured in traffic mishaps during August, according to a tabulated report made yesterday by Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, executive officer of the Police Department.

Although Washington is in the midst of a campaign to promote traffic safety, the report showed an increase of three deaths over July. The number of accidents, however, decreased by 47 over the preceding month. In August there were 517 accidents, while the report for July showed 564.

Only five deaths were recorded during August, 1933. The increase in fatal accidents has not been the fault of the new Safety Observers committee, officials pointed out. The majority of accidents occur during early morning hours after traffic signals have been turned out and crossing policemen withdrawn.

A total of 4,453 arrests was made for traffic violations during the month. This dropped from 5,665 arrests for July. Miscellaneous parking infractions led the list with 1,139. Speeding was second with 528.

One person was arrested for driving with a cracked windshield and another for failing to provide a rear-view mirror for his automobile.

Capital Man Fined $100 for Sun Bath

Comins and Companion Note Appeal in Bay State.

Gloucester, Mass., Sept. 10 (AP).—Leighton Calkins, 66, former Mayor of Plainfield, N. J., and Eben F. Comins, 56, Washington portrait painter, were found guilty in district court today of exposure of person in connection with sun bathing and were fined $100 by Judge William J. Hatch. Both appealed and provided $300 bonds.

In countering the police charges, the men maintained that the spot was secluded and that the height and thickness of the marsh grass concealed them from the public view. Calkins said a physician had advised sun bathing as a remedy for nervous trouble.

Funeral Rites For J. Enos Ray To BeThursday

Internal Revenue Collector Will Be Buried in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Funeral services for J. Enos Ray, 60, Maryland Democratic leader and Collector of Internal Revenue, who died yesterday, will be held Thursday at 2 p. m.

After a short service at the Emory Methodist Church, Washington, where he was a lifelong member, interment will take place in Rock Creek Cemetery. The Rev. Joseph Rives, pastor, will officiate.

Mr. Ray, who was chairman of the Democratic State central committee of Maryland, died yesterday at his home in Chillum after an illness of several months. He suffered an intestinal malady.

His death was considered a great setback to Democrats of Prince Georges County and the State. Although he had officially submitted his resignation, to take place at the forthcoming State convention, the party looked to him for leadership in plans for tomorrow's primaries and the November elections.

Rated as Outstanding Lawyer.

Born and raised at his Chillum estate, near the District line, Mr. Ray was considered one of Maryland's most outstanding lawyers.

At the time of his death he was the senior member of the law firm of Ray & Keefer, Mount Rainier; president of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co., of Hyattsville and Mount Rainier, and a director of the Lincoln National Bank, Washington.

He was graduated from the University of Maryland in 1892. Last June he became president of the alumni association of the institution.

In 1896 Mr. Ray was graduated from the Georgetown University Law School, and became a member of the Maryland House of Delegates in 1904. In 1908 he became speaker of the House and held the distinction of never having one of his rulings repealed.

Named Tax Chairman.

Soon after his appointment as State auditor in 1912 he became a member of the State tax commission. He later became chairman of the commission.

Mr. Ray was also a leader in the Masonic fraternity and other organizations. At the time of his death he was past master of the Chillum Castle Lodge, past patron of the Ada Chapter of the Eastern Star and a member of the local Grange.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Isabel S. Ray; a brother, Alfred Ray, of Takoma Park, and a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Schultz, of Bethesda.

First Wife's Divorce Grounds Free No. 2

His failure to inform his second wife why his first wife had obtained on absolute divorce cost Frank P. Leach, 425 K street, northwest, wife No. 2, yesterday when Justice Letts, in District Supreme Court, granted Mrs. Eileen A. Hay Leach, of the Park Central apartments, an annulment.

Mrs. Leach, through Attorney Raymond Neudecker, said she went through a ceremony with her husband in 1923. She said she then knew there had been a dissolution of his first marriage, but she did not know that Mrs. Henrietta Leach, the first wife, had obtained the decree on statutory grounds.

After their marriage in Baltimore in 1923, the Leaches lived together until last August. The annulment also provided that the second wife might resume her malden name.

Ritchie Lauds Roosevelt in Radio Appeal

Conley Also Takes to Air in Pressing Campaign Fight.

Baltimore, Sept. 10 (Spl.).—Featured by Gov. Ritchie's expression of approval of the New Deal and admiration for President Roosevelt's efforts to lift the Nation out of the depression, the two Democratic gubernatorial candidates made radio speeches here tonight, urging the voters to support their candidacies in the primary election Wednesday.

Gov. Ritchie, in his only radio talk of the primary campaign, spoke at 6:15 p. m. He was followed at 7:45 p. m. by Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, whose strength is concentrated in his home county of Frederick and certain Eastern Shore areas.

The Governor also indicated that if Dr. Conley should be nominated by the Democrats for the governorship, he, Gov. Ritchie would support Dr. Conley in the general election. Dr. Conley, speaking at Frederick last Saturday, declared he was opposed to Gov. Ritchie "three hundred sixty-five days in the year."

Says Conley Not Qualified.

"I appointed Dr. Conley to the board of directors of the State Sanitarium at Sabillasville for three terms, and he is now holding the office as director by my appointment," the Governor said.

"I had a high regard for Dr. Conley as a physician, and I know he has many friends in Frederick County, but I fail to see where he has the experience or the training to make him a satisfactory Governor of Maryland."

Gov. Ritchie declared his vacation trip to France was the first vacation he had taken in 20 years of service to the State of Maryland. He declared he is well and fit now, and, if nominated, is in condition to make a vigorous campaign for the general election.

He assailed the "whispering campaign" which he said is being carried on in western Maryland to make the miners believe that coal is being brought into Maryland from other States for use by Maryland State institutions. He declared that every pound of coal used by the State is Maryland coal, and he added that he on two occasions refused to send Maryland troops to fight Maryland miners during strikes.

He also attacked the reports that he as Governor is discriminating against the oystermen and fishermen of Maryland, and declared that he will favor removing the State tax on gasoline used by the watermen in making their living.

He concluded his speech with an appeal to the voters to support him in the primary and general elections.

Dr. Conley in his radio speech charged that his supporters in the State administration have been threatened and even discharged for backing him, and he assailed what he termed the Ritchie policy in thus fighting him.

Promises have been made by the Ritchie forces to build roads in certain sections of the State in return for support of Gov. Ritchie, Dr. Conley declared.

"Long continuance in office makes perpetual office holders believe that the office was created for their own benefits, pleasure and profit," Dr. Conley said, referring to the fifth-term aspiration of Gov. Ritchie. This condition has unfortunately arrived in Maryland, but I believe the voters of this State will go to the polls on Wednesday and select a new deal and a new dealer."

He said that he had promised no one any job or political office in the State if he is elected Governor.

He also told of difficulties which he said he had experienced in getting newspaper publicity for his campaign, and declared that some newspaper writers after 14 years, are unable to write any name in connection with governorship other than Gov. Ritchie.

He expressed confidence that he would get well over the necessary 50 votes in the nominating convention.

He declared that Gov. Ritchie has made no attempt to refute or deny any of the charges made against him in the current campaign, and under the rules of evidence, the people of Maryland must conclude that these charges are admitted by the Governor. He added that the Governor has practically admitted having injured the watermen of the State during the past 14 years by collecting the State tax imposed upon the gasoline used by the oystermen and fishermen in making their living.

A third radio speaker tonight was Col. Philip Hill, former Representative of the Third District and now a Republican candidate for the United States Senate on the ticket headed by Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough.

Col. Hill cited Goldsborough's experience in public office as eminently fitting him for election as the State chief executive. He called Goldsborough "one of the greatest Governors Maryland ever had."

Heavy Ritchie Vote Foreseen In Counties Bordering Here

So the Lee ticket has no opposition within the Democratic party.

Normally such a situation would mean that the vote cast by Montgomery in the State-wide Democratic fight would be small. But the "anti-Lee" group wants to demonstrate its strength within the Democratic party and the word has gone out for every voter wishing to overthrow the Lee control of the county to vote tomorrow for Dr. Charles H. Conley, the Ritchie opponent.

The Lee organization, on the other hand, has accepted this challenge and orders have gone down through the party organization not to leave unturned a single stone to get out a huge vote for Gov. Ritchie. The Lee leaders have contended that the "antis"—as they call their opponents—have lost ground within the Democratic party and for that reason have joined the Republicans this year. The result of the Ritchie-Conley vote should throw light on the relative strength of the two groups.

The prospect is that the Lee faction will roll up a large vote for Gov. Ritchie. That wing of the party has the organization, while the "antis" are forced to depend chiefly on the candidates they are backing for office to get their vote out. Moreover, in a political feud which has lasted more than 20 years the Lee faction always has been victorious.

Conley Has Following.

Dr. Conley has a small personal following in the county. He was born near Poolesville and has a brother living in the county. He is known among the Democrats in the upper county but is virtually unknown in the populous suburban districts bordering Washington. The leader of his fight in the county is Charles C. Jones, of Kensington, his nephew and a leader in the "down with Lee" movement.

Incidentally E. Brooke Lee, the leader of the Ritchie organization in the county, has withdrawn entirely from active political participation, handing the party reins over to Stedman Prescott, State's attorney in the county. Nevertheless the "antis" refuse to believe that Maj. Lee is out and insist on making him the leader.

On the Republican side, Senator Goldsborough is favored in Montgomery by the fact that a number of Republicans now or formerly connected with the Federal Government live in the county. Since the Senator has been the Maryland Republican leader for six years these voters are allied with him.

The Goldsborough fight is being led by Paul Sleman, of Chevy Chase, chairman of the county Republican central committee; Thomas Anderson, one of the Republican leaders in the fusion movement, and Wilson Townsend. Their influence is chiefly in the lower part of the county. Mr. Nice's managers include Walter and Tom Dawson and former Senator Ovington E. Weller.

Ritchie Machine Working Well.

The Ritchie Democratic organization in Prince Georges County is not expecting any trouble in rolling up a large majority for the Governor. The organization on the whole is harmonious and there is no concerted effort to overthrow its local slate of candidates. The sharpest local fight is over the nomination for State's attorney, between Alan Bowie, the incumbent, and Robert W. McCullough. Dr. Conley, while having some followers, has no organization in the county.

The death of the county leader, J. Enos Ray, yesterday, will not have any effect on the primary fight, because the organization is set for that fight. Mr. Ray's death, however, has deprived the county organization of one of its most solid pillars and in future battles he will be missed, it is contended.

State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, unopposed candidate for renomination and first lieutenant of Mr. Ray, is expected to succeed to the leadership in the county. If elected he also has a good claim for election as president of the State Senate which, in effect, would make him Lieutenant Governor of Maryland.

Prince Georges County Republicans are in a bitter factional fight. A faction led by J. Wilson Ryon and Frank Small, jr., are challenging the organization led by Oliver Metzerott and Gardner Coale. The latter are supporting Senator Goldsborough for Governor, while the Ryon-Small combination is backing Mr. Nice.

The most influential colored leaders in the county are aligned with the Metzerott-Coale group, with one exception, Jeremiah Hawkins, former Mayor of Brentwood—the only colored man ever to serve as Mayor of an American town—is a Nice supporter. He has a goodly following.

In Laurel the Nice candidacy is being supported by Gustavus B. Timanus, former mayor. Mr. Timanus' advocacy of Mr. Nice has received State-wide attention due to a letter he sent to Senator Goldsborough in reply to a request for his support. The Nice managers have circulated this letter in every part of the State.

Mr. Timanus sharply assailed Senator Goldsborough for his connection with the failure of the Baltimore Trust Co. and referred to notes indorsed by the Senator and given by him to the Title Guarantee & Trust Co. and subsequently discounted by that institution with the Baltimore Trust Co.

Mr. Timanus was superintendent of the Maryland House of Correction when Senator Goldsborough years ago was Governor of Maryland. Republicans contend that he is now without influence in Laurel. James Curley, also a former Mayor of Laurel, is supporting Senator Goldsborough.

In Prince Georges County Senator Goldsborough will be helped by the votes of Republicans connected with the Government and by those he helped during his years in the Senate. This strength may be the decisive factor in the Prince Georges outcome. Mr. Smith is not conceded any chance to carry this county.

Camp Ritchie To Be Guarded

Policemen Are Sent as Transients' Presence Alarms Neighbors.

Baltimore, Sept. 10 (AP).—Patrolmen of the Maryland State police have been sent to Camp Ritchie, where 500 to 600 transients are encamped, as a precautionary measure.

No trouble was reported in the area, but residents around Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., were said to be apprehensive over the presence of the transients. They requested police protection.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland and commander of the Twenty-ninth Division, National Guard, said he requested Col. Austin E. Baughman, motor vehicle commissioner, to send "a few" officers to the camp.

Capt. Edward McK. Johnson, of the State police, said he had ordered several of his men to patrol the country surrounding Camp Ritchie.

"There is nothing serious in the situation," Maj. Gen. Reckord said. "There is no police protection in the area and the people were worried. I asked Col. Baughman to send a few men to patrol the area."

Virginia Court Gets Appeal On Milk Rule

State Commission Won in Early Test of New Law.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.).—With a test of Virginia's new milk commission law scheduled, the State Supreme Court of Appeals will open its September term in Staunton tomorrow.

Twenty odd cases are on the argument docket, and these will occupy the court for perhaps two weeks, but the justices will pass upon many other motions, petitions, writs, &c., in addition to handing down opinions in cases argued and submitted at the June term in Wytheville.

Chief Justice Preston W. Campbell will preside and associate justices are Henry W. Holt, Louis S. Epes, Edward W. Hudgins, Herbert B. Gregory, George L. Browning and Joseph W. Chinn. H. H. Wyt is Staunton clerk of the court.

The Supreme Court will hear arguments on the milk law at the Staunton term, it having been announced last week by Justice Holt that an appeal had been granted.

R. J. Reynolds, a producer-distributor, and two other dairymen, are challenging the State milk commission's authority to fix requirements as to content and to establish price scales in Virginia.

The first step in the litigation was taken in law and equity court, Part II, before Judge Frank Sutton in Richmond several weeks ago. At that time Attorney General A. P. Staples was successful in obtaining an injunction restraining Reynolds and others from selling milk in the Staunton milkshed at retail prices other than those fixed by the commission. Defeated in the first test, Reynolds now appeals to the supreme court.

A cross injunction has been filed in Judge A. D. Dabney's court in Charlottesville. This, too, has for its purpose the prevention of the commission putting into effect its price scale in the Charlottesville milkshed.

Pending an opinion by the supreme court, expected some time during the Staunton term, Reynolds and his associates are advertising and selling their product at figures lower than those set by the commission. Their contention is that the State has fixed the price too high, and that they can make a reasonable profit at the lower retail price.

Snead Resigns ABC Board Job

Drew Up Leases for 40 Liquor Stores in Virginia.

Richmond, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today received the resignation of George Morrell Snead, director of the division of real estate and insurance. The resignation becomes effective September 15 and the board is now drawing up formal papers of acceptance.

Mr. Snead, who has been with the board since June 20, has drawn up leases for 40 of the board's stores and, feeling that the major part of his work is done, he plans to resume his real estate business in Lynchburg, he said. Sixty-five locations have been leased to date, this number including stores already in operation, and six additional places have been designated as sites for stores in the future.

It is not expected that many more stores will be added to this number. The real estate department will carry on the work of the division, which will be more or less routine since the majority of stores selections for this year have been made, the board said. The board today announced the personnel for the new store to be opened at Orange, Va., probably late this week.

The personnel: Dr. J. Hayward Stratton, Charles Collins Roberts, and Courtney Wirt McIntosh. Designation as to manager and clerks will be made later.

U. S. Forecasts 22% Reduction In Apple Crop

Smallest Production in 13 Years Possible, Says Report.

(Associated Press.)

The season's apple production was estimated yesterday by the Agriculture Department at 111,703,000 bushels, the lowest forecast on September 1 since 1927.

The department said the crop might be shorter even than 1927's and the smallest since 1921.

Present indications, the department said, are that the crop would be 29 per cent smaller than the 1927-1931 average and 22 per cent less than last year.

A very slight improvement in the September 1 condition as compared with August 1 was attributed by the department to rains accompanied by lower temperatures in the apple producing regions. The East especially was benefited and the department said the fruit was sizing well.

Of the 111,703,000 bushel forecast, the department said 67,863,000 bushels would be the approximate commercial crop. That figure is 9 per cent less than last year and 30 per cent less than the 1927-1931 average.

A sixth of the bearing trees were killed and a fourth injured in New York State by the severe 1933-1934 winter, the department said a recent survey showed.

A comparison of the 1927-1931 average with the indicated production for this year follows for the principal producing States:

	Average.	1934.
Virginia	12,914,000	7,950,000
New York	16,836,000	10,800,000
Pennsylvania	8,909,000	7,098,000
Michigan	6,261,000	5,521,000
Washington	32,306,000	32,300,000
Oregon	4,981,000	5,062,000
California	9,839,000	7,760,000

Virginians Get Many Foreign Service Posts

Harris & Ewing.

ALEXANDER WEDDELL.

(Associated Press.)

Knock around the world just a little bit and you're sure to find a Virginian—that is if you go near the legations or consulates as you're almost bound to do.

Twenty-seven sons of the Old Dominion represent their country as members of the United States Foreign Service in places near and far, a State Department list showed yesterday.

Topping them all is Alexander Weddell, of Richmond, who is the ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Argentina. He is a foreign service veteran and had reached the highest rung on the career men's ladder—Foreign Service officer, class one—when he resigned in 1928 after 20 years' service abroad.

Returned to Service.

He was recalled to duty on June 3 of last year by President Roosevelt to represent him at Buenos Aires. Mr. Weddell started off as secretary to the Minister of Denmark in 1908 and afterwards served as consul or consul general in the picturesque Mediterranean Isle of Zanzibar, Catonia, Italy; Athens, Cairo, Calcutta and Mexico.

Two of the Virginians hold the rank of consul general. They are Ernest L. Ives, Norfolk, stationed at Algiers, Algieria, and Kenneth S. Patton, of Salem, the consul general at Amsterdam, Netherlands. Mr. Ives attended both Virginia Military Institute and the College of William and Mary before he was named vice consul at Mannheim, Germany, in 1909.

For many years thereafter he served in central Europe at Madgeburg, Frankfort-on-the-Main, Cologne, Breslau and Budapest. Subsequent assignments took him to Paris and Alexandria, before he was appointed first secretary of the embassy at Constantinople in 1925. He was appointed consul general at Algiers in 1933 after holding posts at Copenhagen and Pretoria, South Africa.

Held Many Posts.

Mr. Patton entered the Foreign Service the year before Mr. Ives, in 1908. He was at the State Department first and then served at Marseilles, Rome, Ceiba, Lisbon, La Rochelle, Calais, Paris, Belgrade and Leipzig. He was consul general at Batavia, Dutch East Indies, before appointment to Amsterdam. The other Virginians in the Foreign Service include:

William H. Beach, of Concord Wharf, Consul at Antwerp, Belgium; Harold M. Collins, of Lynchburg, Consul at Edmonton, Alberta; William A. Bickers, Madison County, Consul at London; David G. Berger, of Gretna, Consul at Tsingtao, China; George Tait, of Amherst County, Consul at Paris; Parker W. Buhrman, of Botetourt County, Consul at Cologne, Germany; Leonard G. Dawson, of Staunton, Counsel at Munich, Germany; Charles C. Broy, of Sperryville, and Robert B. Macatee, of Front Royal, Consuls at London; Rufus H. Lane, jr., of Charlottesville, Consul at Patras, Greece; Christian T. Steger, of Danville, Consul at Beirut, Syria.

Orlando H. Massie, of Charlottesville, Vice Consul at Halifax, Nova Scotia; Camden L. McLain, of Good View, Vice Consul at Santiago, Chile; Nathaniel Lancaster, jr., of Ashland, Vice Consul at Bombay, India; Merritt N. Cootes, of Norfolk, Vice Consul at Honskong, China; Perry N. Jester, of Richmond, Vice Consul at Barbados, British West Indies; William E. Flournoy, jr., of Norfolk, Vice Consul at Guatemala, Guatemala. T. Monroe Fisher, of Strasburg, Vice Consul at Trieste, Italy; Charles H. Taliaferro, of Harrisonburg, Vice Consul at Merida, Yucatan; T. Muldrup Portayth, of Buckingham County, Vice Consul at Callao-Lima, Peru; J. Rives Childs, of Lynchburg, Second Secretary at Teheran, Persia; Alvin T. Rowe, of Fredericksburg, Third Secretary and Vice Consul at Bogota, Colombia; Randolph Harrison, jr., of Lynchburg, Third Secretary at Rome.

Many Aid Projects Only Arouse False Hopes, Marylander Says.

Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, long a leading advocate of old-age pensions, issued a warning yesterday to elderly people not to be taken in by the numerous old-age pension associations which have sprung up in all parts of the country since President Roosevelt announced that he expects to present a program for economic security to the next Congress.

"These organizations," said Mr. Lewis, "ostensibly have been formed to promote particular plans for old-age pensions, but seem interested often in the money they collect from elderly people through contributions and the sale of booklets and magazines, and even of petitions to be sent to members of Congress. The old-age pension plans proposed are often fantastic and serve no purpose other than to arouse hopes among the aged which can not possibly be fulfilled."

Mr. Lewis cited an organization which advocates payment by the Federal Government of a retirement pension of $200 per month to everyone who is over 60 years of age; the money to be raised through a 10 per cent retail sales tax.

"It is certain that such proposals are working incalculable harm to the cause of old-age pensions," he said. "These people say that they will distribute $2,000,000,000 per month in pensions. That amounts to $24,000,000,00 per year, and the entire income of all of the people of this country last year was less than $40,000,000,000, and in the best year we have ever had only $90,000,000,000. Less than 10 per cent of all people are over 60 years of age, but this plan would give them more than half of the entire income of the country."

Virginia Woman Killed in Crash

Portsmouth, Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.).—One person is dead and six others are injured as a result of an automobile-taxicab crash on Route No. 58 near Alexanders Corner, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson, 50, wife of Anton Anderson, who lives on Route No. 58 about 4 miles from the scene of the accident, was killed.

The injured are Ernest M. Morningstar, 26, 1429 Potomac avenue, Washington, D. C., laceration of the knee and chest injury; William C. Wolf, 1620 Brown avenue, Norfolk, lacerations of the temple, bruises of the body and chest injury; Mrs. Stella M. Wolf, scalp wound; Bennie Wolf, 12, possible fractured skull; Willie May Wolf, 15, slight injuries.

Drivers of the vehicles were listed by Norfolk County police as Charles R. Doleman, son of Mrs. Anderson, driver of the automobile, and Morningstar, driver of the taxicab. Doleman was arrested charged with reckless driving and freed on bond of $500.

53 Shut Mills Start Looms In Carolinas

5,000 Workers Return to Jobs Through Lines of Armed Guards.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 10 (AP).—Five thousand textile workers, filing through lines of heavily armed soldiers and special guards, returned to their jobs in the two Carolinas today as 53 strike-closed mills reopened.

Flying squadrons of unionistts, called out to combat reopening plans, made little resistance as the workers returned to their posts, confining themselves to statements of their case. They planned an intensive organization campaign for the next few days, as opposed to the force-out system followed last week.

Twenty-seven of the plants which reopened today were in Alamance County (Burlington), North Carolina. Many of them operated with a skeleton force. A considerable portion of them were hosiery mills, not actually subject to the strike call until Wednesday, but shut down during flying-squad activities last week. Observers estimated 5,000 of the county's 6,200 normal textile employment was still out. Five mills, employing 2,000, made no attempt to reopen today.

Honea Path Mill Opens.

Only three small mills reopened in South Carolina, employing 500 persons. Included among them was the Chiquola mill at Honea Path, where seven pickets were killed in a gun battle closedown last Thursday.

Militiamen were set on the trail of a flying squadron, which closed the small Altamaha, N. C., mill for the second time, and officers announced the roving motorcades of strikers would "have to stop."

Pickets closed a small cotton mill at High Point, N. C., which was on edge awaiting the outcome of the hosiery strike call, effective Wednesday. There are 7,000 hosiery workers in that city alone.

In the Carolinas, as in Georgia, the Communists were accused of trying to use the strike to fit their own ends. The Atlanta chief of police cited instances of Communist activity, and the Southern Textile Bulletin of Charlotte charged some United Textile Workers' leaders were actually agents for the National Textile Workers Union, a Communist organization which bred bloody riot in Gastonia five years ago.

The strike situation in Georgia and Alabama was little changed, more than half the normal employment remaining idle. In the Carolinas, 106,000 were idle, with approximately 75,000 working. Two hundred and ninety-five mills were closed and 226 operating.

With mills surrounded by guards, there was no serious disturbance. A dynamite bomb was exploded in the road leading to the Howell Mill at Cherryville, N. C., only one of Gaston County's 104 plants operating. No one was hurt and little damage resulted.

Early Peace Seen In American Mills

volition to extend the arbitration proposal, which would entail an agreement from the manufacturers to be bound by the board's decision. He added:

"We attach this condition: settlement will be made now, when it is made, whether by arbitration or otherwise, with the textile industries as such.

"That means that there must be settlement with the entire cotton textile industry, with the entire wool and worsted industry, with the entire silk industry and so on. There will be no settlement mill by mill in any of the divisions of the industry.

"This is as much to the advantage of the industry as to that of the union. It will mean fair competition and universal wage stability."

The labor leader reported 30 additional mills closed yesterday and said the strike lines were tighter than ever. He estimated the participants at 500,000.

"The strike goes on with all the vigor we can put into it," he said.

"Not a single man is to leave his post of duty. Not a single picket is to be withdrawn. Not a single mill must be allowed to run. Those are orders from the strike committee.

"Our fight goes on. We have merely given the industry a little longer time to enter the peaceful path to settlement before we send down the line the final instructions for the long campaign. * * *

"I wish I could read to all of you the hundreds of letters and telegrams that come to strike headquarters each day. They combine the cry of an exploited people with the determination that brings victory to those whose sole weapon is their courage, their unbeatable, indomitable determination that injustice shall cease and that the men and women who are to grow up from the childhood of today shall know a better way of life."

Then he announced, with a protest, the wounding of another unionist in an Alabama clash and the barricading of mills by owners in Saylesville, R. I.

The union, Gorman reiterated, will not agree to any proposal which might materialize calling for reopening of the mills pending arbitration.

'The Coming American Boom'

British Author Says Administration's First Aim Must Be to Let Industries Make Profit.

By Maj. Lawrence L. B. Angas

This is the fifth installment of the book by Maj. L. L. B. Angas, British economist, which recently caused a flurry in American financial circles. Although some of the economics expounded will not stand an acid test, The Post is nevertheless publishing the book because it does contain interesting material.

Installment V.

The President must have been aware that going back to gold at an undervalued rate might upset the on-gold European countries and cause them to increase their tariffs and deflate, but on the principle of "America first" it doubtless seemed at the time the best thing to do. Roosevelt's policy was thus in the nature of a half measure, steering midway between the extreme claims of the paper inflationists on the one hand and the out-and-out gold bigots on the other, and yet holding all the while to the ultimate ideal of a dollar evenly possessing internal stability, which entails a fluctuating exchange rate in terms of gold.

As regards the President's political bias: He is neither out-and-out Socialist nor out-and-out capitalist. He certainly desires to help the under dog, and apparently thinks that there is room for a fairer redistribution of wealth. He also intends to eliminate all financial abuses, but for all that he fully realizes that under the capitalist system profits are the mainspring of industry, and that if the prospect of profit is eliminated, either through over-taxation, too high wage rates, controlled prices, confiscation or deflation, employers will become loath to produce and employ. Unemployment will, in consequence, grow, and the size of the distributable cake will diminish.

The Administration's first aim, therefore, must always be to let industries make reasonable profits, and thus stimulate expansion and general employment, for it is only if the cake expands as a whole that all will be able to have bigger portions.

But that is not to say that the President's sympathies lie only with the capitalists. He merely realizes that, so long as capitalism remains, he must take full account of the all-controlling profit motive if the workers are to benefit.

View of Wage Increase.

Nor, incidentally, does the fact that the Government tries to raise general wages with prices prove that its sympathies are solely socialistic. Raising wages with prices is not an anti-business measure, for, if traders are to be prosperous, and if profits are to continue, effective demand must keep pace with prices and supply.

Meanwhile, the President's plan to eliminate financial abuses should have the moral support of all. His general policy, of course, is a mixed one of relief, recovery and reform, and all his bills have these goals as their motive, although, naturally, some of them, e. g., the securities act and his bill for shorter hours, have temporarily interfered with the upswing of business, and thus for a while have appeared contradictory.

His rules and regulations at the moment are stiff, but when young horses are being broken in they require a tight rein at the outset. Subsequently you can ride them on the snaffle with safety.

As regards the Administration's financial policy as a whole:

Later on it will probably be necessary to establish some form of central banking system, and also to try to arrange that never again will industrial progress be held up solely by shortage of money or by institutional defects in the monetary machine.

"Reflate—Then Stabilize."

For the moment, however, the plan is, briefly, "First Reflate, Then Stabilize" — and when Roosevelt talks of stabilization he certainly refers more to the internal price index than to the less important factor of the foreign exchanges. This he has stated again and again.

Persons, however, who have not studied the theory of money and the theory of the business cycle seem to think that the whole policy of the President is dangerous and crazy. Firstly, they argue that no inflation has ever yet occurred without giving rise later on to disaster. Secondly, they say that since it is lower prices that stimulate demand the objective should be to lower prices instead of trying to raise them. Thirdly, they say that Roosevelt is destroying all confidence by tampering with money and dangerously increasing the Government debt. They argue that until the burden of taxation and debt is lifted "industry can not be expected to recover."

Secondly, although lower prices ...ay stimulate the demand for a single commodity, the prospect of lower prices in general merely makes production dry up and makes consumers hold off, while bankers begin to restrict credits cumulatively, and thus bring about further falls in trade. The President is therefore forced, as part and parcel of his plan, to create the prospect of rising general prices.

"Primer" Seen Needed.

Thirdly, as regards increasing the Government debt: The ideal would, of course, be to be able to improve general trade without any Government expenditure, but since the public are nervous about using the surplus bank credit facilities now available, it is essential to provide a "primer." This might be done by printing and spending paper money direct, but this goes too near to dangerous inflation; the alternative "primer" of Government borrowing and Government expenditure is therefore preferred. Then when general business has begun to revive, industry can be taxed and Government loans paid off.

In view of the fact that even credit inflation has so far hardly been resorted to at all, the results of the New Deal over the past year and a half have been not inconsiderable.

Index of business activity	+ 40%
Commodity prices	+ 40%
Security prices	+100%
Bond prices	+ 30%
Pig iron production	+190%
Automobile production	+170%
Business failures	— 40%
Imports and exports	+ 50%
Building	+200%
Car loadings	+ 40%
Employment	+4,000,000%

Gain in Indices.

As the Royal Bank of Canada has stated, comparatively few indices of business activity have failed to show gains of at least 25 per cent, within the period mentioned. Employment after being down to 57.2 in March, 1933, had attained a level of 78.7 in March, 1934; the gain in pay rolls was more than proportionate.

The prices of wheat, corn, cotton, hides, wool and many other agricultural commodities had increased by more than 50 per cent, in fact, that for cotton had increased by 94 per cent, and that for wool by 95 per cent. Farmers' buying power and labor's buying power had begun to make itself felt, and both chain store and department store sales were up by 40 per cent in March.

Tomorrow: How the Administration's monetary policy provides driving force, despite recent reaction in business, for trade boom by creation of bank notes and deposits.

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.).—A mounted delegation of six pink-coated riders of the Loudoun Hunt Club will be sent to Manassas to take part in the Loudoun division of the parade at the annual dairy festival September 28, it was decided at a meeting last night.

The delegation will be part of the escort for the queen and her court. It is probable that W. H. Lipscomb, master of foxhounds of the Loudoun Hunt, will ride with the group.

Miss Elizabeth Rust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David N. Rust, of Rockbridge Farm, near Leesburg, will represent the county as "Princess Loudoun."

Heavy Snow Covers Peaks Around Denver

Denver, Sept. 10 (AP).—Most mountain peaks west of Denver were white capped today for the first time since July. Heavy snows have fallen in the high country in the last few days.

The Weather Bureau said many peaks which usually are snow covered throughout the summer months had shown no snow on them since July, because of light precipitation last winter.

Scores Injured As Strike Gains In New England

2 Shot in Rhode Island During First Serious Riots There.

Boston, Sept. 10 (AP).—Two men were shot down and more than two score others either bruised or overcome by tear gas in the most serious textile strike rioting in New England since the strike was declared.

The shooting of two members of a crowd at Saylesville, R. I., was the first strike shooting in this section of the country. More than 25 other persons were injured, including the 10-year-old son of a Rhode Island jurist unwittingly caught in a crush before the Sayles finishing plant.

A few hours later 15 persons were injured, several seriously, in a riot at the Pawdrell & Alexander curtain plant at Danielson, Conn., as 1,500 picketers were dispersed by State police hurling tear gas bombs.

The men shot at Saylesville were said to have been fired upon by a guard of 20 deputy sheriffs armed with shotguns who have been guarding the plant where 2,500 operatives have continued to work despite efforts of organizers for the United Textile Workers to persuade them to join the big walkout.

The tear gas came from a score of steel-helmeted State police assigned to the plant. Not until the jeering crowd had been literally pushed over the village lines was quiet restored.

The trouble started as the afternoon shift was reporting for work and, as on two previous occasions, many of the company's windows were shattered before police got the the situation in hand.

United Textile Workers headquarters at Pawtucket, R. I., had announced late last week that 1,000 pickets would be thrown about the Saylesville plant today to force it to close.

Forced to stand behind a deadline which had been established far from the plant this morning, the throng did not become unruly until the afternoon shift was due to report. Then it suddenly went out of control.

The crowd pushed forward and the State police went into action, adding to the uproar the thump of swinging nightsticks and the explosions of tear-gas bombs.

Pickets Come From Outside.

Practically all of the would-be pickets had come from elsewhere in the strike-affected Blackstone Valley area and from Fall River, Mass., where the strike has closed every mill in that populous textile center.

Lionel Costa, 30, of Pawtucket, fell with buckshot in his left hip and Armand Gervais, 27, of Central Falls, stopped a charge of buckshot with his side. At a hospital their condition was reported to be not serious. In the melee in front of the mill, Louis Fercki, 37, of Pawtucket, received a possible fracture of the skull. His condition was said to be serious.

The first clash occurred as the night shift prepared to enter the mills. When ordinary methods of restoring peace failed, the police laid down a barrage of tear gas that not only swept the crowd back, but permeated nearby houses, causing the prompt evacuatoin of many.

Robert and Roland Blais, 2-year-old twins, living nearby; Miss Anna Hayden, 18, of Central Falls; Rock P. Martel, president of the Central Falls Common Council, and an unidentified woman were rendered unconscious by the fumes, but were treated at the scene.

State Trooper Carl Carroll was injured about the head and leg, presumably by hurled rocks during the fighting in front of the mill, and Matthew Dica, 21, of Pawtucket, suffered a deep gash on the face. Charles Risk, jr., 10-year-old son of Judge Charles Risk of Central Falls District Court, caught in the swirling crush, was badly bruised.

The State police immediately barricaded with heavy wire the three entrances to the village and announced that no person, unless on business satisfactory to the police, would be permitted to pass the new "dead line."

Elsewhere throughout the six States the start of the second week of the general strike saw steady accessions to the ranks of the strikers and at nightfall a survey of the six States indicated that more than 157,000 operatives were idle against an estimated 77,000 still at work.

Inquiry Finds British Arms Peddled Here

"No, and we won't as long as I am president," said Allard.

Earlier evidence was presented that "50 grand" or $50,000 was to be given the "chefe de cabinet" or cabinet adviser of the Brazilian government in 1933 for arranging an arms deal for the American Armament Corporation. This was disclosed in a letter from A. J. Miranda, president of the armament firm, to his brother, I. J. "Iggy" Miranda.

"It is hard to understand here, but it is a certain way those people have down there of going about business," shrugged dark, curly-haired A. J. Miranda, who passed all morning on the witness stand.

Other developments were:

The State Department was charged with and denied advising American munitions dealers to get an injunction blocking the United States from interfering in arms shipments to warring Bolivia and Paraguay.

Britten's Name in Testimony.

Testimony that Representative Fred A. Britten (Republican), Illinois, accompanied officials of the American Armament Corporation to the State Department, when they sought relaxation of the President's Gran Chaco arms embargo.

Statement by the managing director of the Soley Armament Co., in a letter to Miranda, that arms deals generally require "greasing" of officials.

Evidence that when the year's armistice between Colombia and Peru was about to expire last March, the American Armament Corporation, looking for new business, began negotiating for several million dollars' worth of war supplies.

Testimony that the American Armament Corporation, by way of extending courtesies to its customers, arranged for four Japanese military officials to inspect the Lockheed aircraft plant on the Pacific Coast.

Competition Charge Renewed.

Charges by Miranda that Vickers-Armstrong, London munitions dealers, furnished unusually stiff competition in South America, resorting on one occasion to use of women of doubtful character. A similar charge was made last week by an official of the Driggs Ordnance & Engineering Co., in reference to Vickers' Turkish competition.

Allegations in correspondence with the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation that "someone collected at least $100,000" in Peru as "commission" on a British airplane contract.

Suggestions that the United States might furnish China with surplus British arms came in a letter from Managing Director Ball of the Soley Armament Co., to the American Armament Corporation.

Predicting fresh Japanese excursions into China, Ball said:

"To place herself in a favorable position, Japan must either buy over the Soviet or fight them—and Japan will do one or the other before attending to some more of China.

"Such a move on Japan's part would seriously affect the United States' interests in China, and we think that the United States would, under the above circumstances, support the Chinese, supply them with arms, &c.

Urged Contact Here.

"In such an eventuality something might be done with the big stocks of rifles here, also machine guns, and we think it might be very advisable for you to approach the United States Department for Foreign Affairs and the War Department and hand them a list of what stocks there are over here, informing the departments at the same time that you are the sole representative for the United States."

Ball repeatedly reminded the American firm of the huge British surplus stocks in the hands of Soley, which he estimated worth $30,000,000. Well up on the list were rifles of the 1914 pattern numbering 800,000, with enough spares to build up another 200,000; 34,000 Hotchkiss machine guns, 28,000 Lewis machine guns, 6,000 Vickers machine guns, 19,000 revolvers and 120,000,000 rounds of rifle and machine gun ammunition.

"It is doubtful if your authorities are aware of the stocks here, for the United States does not ferret around with spies or 'intelligence' people to the extent that Europe does, and if some sudden emergency did arise in the Far East there would be a big rush for surplus materials for immediate delivery * * *" read one letter from Ball.

The letter was dotted with sardonic observations. Disclosing that the Japanese government has lately bought large quantities of Lewis guns of .303 caliber, he commented:

"Their Hotchkiss and similar types are not equal to the Lewis for aero use by the observer, neither has the 6.5 bullet as much effect as the .303 armor-piercing type or the incendiary or 'tracer' type.

"As you know, 'incendiary' bullets are prohibited, so they have become 'tracers'—what is in a name."

Joseph W. Green, of the State Department's division of western European affairs, took the stand in the morning to deny Miranda's charge that the State Department encouraged armament makers to seek an injunction against the Chaco arms embargo.

Did Not Suggest Suits.

The department, he said, told the munitions men that interpretation of the Congressional resolution prohibiting sales rested with the courts and not with the State Department. But while the department refused to advise or interpret, it never once suggested bringing suits against the Government, he insisted.

As the afternoon wore on, President Allard and C. W. Webster, of the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, and H. G. Hotchkiss, counsel, took the witness stand. Varying from the practice of Senators examining witnesses, Alger L. Hess, slight, dark and soft-voiced, of the committee's investigating staff, took over questioning.

Evidence that the Du Ponts through subsidiaries have 28 per cent interest in General Motors; that General Motors owns 48 per cent of General Aviation Corporation; that these two last in turn own 52 per cent of the stock in the North American Corporation; that North American owns the stock of the Sperry Corporation, with which it has interlocking directorates, and that the Sperry Corporation owns 300,000 shares of Curtiss-Wright, was gradually developed.

Military Plane Sales Told.

Hess charged that of 179 planes sold abroad by the Curtiss-Wright Corporation between 1930 and 1934, only 8 were "commercial" planes and the rest military. Senator Nye interjected that whether "commercial" or "military," it was his belief that all planes could be converted for war use.

There were frequent references by Curtiss-Wright witnesses to what they called "unfair" competition in Far Eastern and South American fields, particularly by English and Italian firms.

President Allard said the United Aircraft Corporatoin was the Curtiss-Wright company's strongest competitor in China. One letter from a representative of the firm accused United Aircraft representative of circulating a report that Curtiss-Wright was trying to sell China old planes touched up with new paint and a change of motors.

The Treasury Issues.

The terms of the Treasury's offer to exchange new notes and bonds for the maturing short-time issue and the called portions of the Fourth Liberty Loan, ought to bring success.

The fact that the maturing short-time issue is selling above par means that the exchange will be substantially complete.

On the called bonds the premium price, too, indicates that holders will take either the 4-year 2½ per cent notes or the 10-to-12-year 3¼ per cent bonds. It will be interesting to see from the choice as between the 4-year maturity and the 10-to-12-year maturity at the higher rate where the appetite of the investor directs itself in the greater degree. The 4-year 2½ per cent notes ordinarily would make a greater appeal to the commercial banker. The longer-time 3¼ per cent issue, under ordinary conditions, would make more of an appeal to the savings banks, insurance companies and other trustee investors. But under present conditions, it may be that even those who ordinarily take the longer term and higher rate investments may prefer the notes of shorter term and lower rate. To a certain extent it will depend upon who are the holders of the maturing 4¼ per cent Liberty Loan bonds.

In any event, the fact that at the moment the maturing issues and the called issues are selling at substantial premiums, indicates that the new issues will be heavily subscribed. Should anything unfavorable intervene in the few days before the subscriptions are due, the Treasury can pay off in cash any unexchanged portion of the issues out of the $1,500,000,000 cash balances which it now holds.

For The General Welfare.

Rerouting of street car lines and further coordination of the local transportation system are one of the most important community problems facing the District. Authorities are in agreement that the present set-up is wasteful of time and energy. Of course, the problem of making specific changes is very complicated, but out of the welter of suggestions that have already been made and that will be made at the current hearing, it should not be impossible to evolve a far more satisfactory traffic plan.

The question of merging bus lines with the now unified street car company was properly raised at the first session of the hearings before the Public Utilities Commission. Obviously, the city's transportation system should be operated as a single unit, providing coordinated service to all sections. Whether or not the plan presented by the Capital Transit Co. should be approved is a technical issue which deserves careful scrutiny. But it certainly ought to be disposed of before any plan of rerouting is finally accepted.

Many groups are prepared to lay before the commission alternative plans and objections to various routings suggested by the experts. Each local area is looking out for its own interests. Hotels would like to have adjacent street car lines removed. Some business districts object to the laying of tracks where none exist at present. But these are minor issues that must be merged into the more general problem of improving the city's transportation system. The Public Utilities Commission must regard every suggestion in its relation to the broad general plan of facilitating the movement of all traffic. Citizens and local groups could be most helpful to the commission by shaping their own ideas from this point of view.

A Great Victory!

Many suburbanites are expressing appreciation because the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has changed the tone and volume of its locomotive whistles. On several steam trains whistles that are similar to those in use on electric trains have been installed, and it is said other substitutions will follow. Now the notes in a warning blast may be compared with Rubinstein's Melody in F, whereas the former whistles were distinctly Wagnerian.

Modestly The Post may claim a moiety of credit for having brought about this soothing sirup of sound. Several weeks ago, in editorial comment, attention was called to the rackety blasts which served as warnings at grade crossings, and it was suggested that musical sounds would serve the same purpose and also give pleasure both to persons residing near the railroad tracks and to passengers on the trains. An official of the Baltimore & Ohio wrote The Post to the effect that softer tones would be substituted for the annoying screech owl, and he has kept his word.

This official called attention in his letter to several nuisances in the way of noise which he would like to have abated. He specified the neighbor, who at midnight turns on his radio full blast and keeps his windows wide open (The Post has already, but unsuccessfully, condemned him); two cats, belonging to other neighbors, that do valiant battle under his window; also a dog that barks from sundown to sunup. To these might be added the milk delivery truck which drops bottled bombs at 2 a. m., and the neighbor with a shrill voice who at intervals between 11 p. m. and 1 a. m. calls "goodnight" to departing guests.

Japan's Naval Policy.

Reports from Tokyo indicate that Japan has definitely decided to assert a right to naval parity with Great Britain and the United States, whether or not such an agreement can be negotiated. It is difficult to place any other interpretation upon the official announcement that the Japanese cabinet has decided upon abrogation of the Washington and London naval agreements.

In an obvious attempt to minimize the importance of this decision, a spokesman for the foreign office says: "We do not intend to enter a naval competition or increase the burdens of the people of the world." But in view of the step just taken these words carry little reassurance.

Apparently Japan intends to use her decision to renounce the Washington Treaty as a club to secure adoption of her new naval program. Most provisions of the London Treaty expire at the end of 1935, but limitations imposed on naval forces by the pact of 1922 might remain in effect indefinitely unless repudiated by one of the signatories. By giving notice before December 31 of her desire to terminate the treaty, Japan can free herself of all restrictions by the end of 1936. If no country should file notice of repudiation before the end of the present year, however, the treaty would stand until two years after such notice had been given.

Even though Japan is unsatisfied with the present ratio, therefore, no need for repudiation of the treaty is apparent. A new conference will be held next year at which the entire situation will be discussed, and, it is hoped, a new agreement negotiated. If the conference should fail, Japan could then renounce the treaty, if she should so desire, and risk a naval construction race two years later.

Abrogation of the treaty before the conference is held, however, has the appearance of an ultimatum. Japan's delegates seem to be going to the exploratory meetings, scheduled for October, armed with demands and threats. Great Britain and the United States must accept her terms or see the existing agreement scrapped. Certainly that attitude is not conducive to amicable negotiations in which the relative interests of the three great naval powers can be considered.

In spite of this arbitrary procedure in Tokyo, American and British officials would do well to avoid counter-maneuvers of a similar provocative nature. Retaliatory moves at this stage would not improve the situation. If Japan insists upon breaking down the naval treaties by unilateral action, the full responsibility should be allowed to rest upon her government, without possibility of alibi or divided blame.

A New Deadly Gas.

Announcement of the discovery of a new gas, which apparently explodes when coming in contact with the heat of the human body, is at first glance disturbing. Since the gruesome use of poison gas during the World War, humanity's imagination has run riot over the devastating effects which new discoveries may have upon those forced to take part in the next conflict. It would have been disconcerting indeed if this new discovery had been made by chemists engaged in research for the definite purpose of devising new ways to wipe out great masses of their fellow men. There is, however, less reason for alarm when it is realized that the discovery of the unnamed gas was made accidentally during the course of industrial experimentation for the purpose of finding new materials of commerce.

One expert has expressed belief that in future wars nothing more deadly than the mustard gas which raised havoc in Europe after 1914 will be used. His view is encouraging, but it may be too optimistic. The expert remarks that by common consent no chemists in this country are seeking new means of wholesale slaughter. What is happening in the laboratories of foreign governments he is unable to say. Perhaps nothing. It all sounds very hopeful. The next war will be no deadlier than the last. The suffering will be no worse; the maimed no more crippled; the shell-shocked no more unbalanced.

It is pleasant to be thus reassured that our scientists are seeking no further means of widespread murder. But is it so reassuring to know that as they go about their tasks, seeking ways to make automobiles run faster, finding new chemicals for the myriad industrial purposes of a complex and mechanized world, they accidentally stumble upon formulas that can be perverted into terrible agencies of destruction? Yet we can not stop the advance of science. Nor would we want to. Knowledge will be sought as long as there are human beings to hold test tubes.

Abolition of such means of death, or even a ban on future discoveries in this field, is apparently too much to hope for. It is the will to control them that must be sought. If that could ever be effectively asserted we would no longer have to fear the mixing of gases in the halls of commercialized science.

More Sand Than Blood.

Whatever the American public may think of bullfights as practiced in Latin lands, there is always applause for those impromptu bullfights which occasionally occur at home. Is there also to be garnered from them a hint that something more than valor—perhaps a certain geographic origin—is required for success in the sport? Witness, anyhow, the glorious time which Washington's provincial neighbor, New York, had the other day over a corrida at the historic corner of Delancey street and the Bowery.

The one-ton bull, headed for a butcher's, broke loose and ran wild. Seven policemen of Manhattan's finest, members of doughty Emergency Squad No. 2, turned banderilleros, while the role of espadas was essayed by seven of their equally courageous comrades. Yet, though their will proved plentiful, they found no way; the object of their laudable endeavors escaped their every heroism. It was not a policeman that finally delivered the estocada—in this case a bloodless blow. It was plain John Prehopke. And Prehopke hails from Brooklyn, the borough that has produced our country's one professional bull-fighter, Sydney Franklin.

Excessive Optimism.

As it seems to have been generally interpreted, Donald Richberg's final report on achievements of the New Deal was excessively optimistic. More than 8,000,000 individuals are shown to have obtained some kind of employment under the recovery program. In reality, of course, a large number of these men and women are still without work and many of them are on the relief rolls.

Although he expresses disappointment that there has not been a greater reduction in unemployment, Mr. Richberg definitely lists among "the achievements of one year" these "facts:"

"Over 4,000,000 workers have been reemployed in private enterprises.

"Over 4,000,000 others have been given temporary public employment.

The number of men absorbed in private industries during the last year has often been estimated at approximately 4,000,000. But no accurate figures are available. The American Federation of Labor estimates that 10,772,000 workers were without jobs in July, as compared with 11,793,000 in the corresponding month of 1933. In other words, the Federation's figures indicate that slightly more than 1,000,000 men have been reemployed in the last year. If Mr. Richberg has more accurate and complete information, he would do the country a service by revealing it in detail together with its source.

It is curious, too, that Mr. Richberg should list among the "achievements" of the Administration 4,000,000 temporary relief jobs. Presumably he is referring to the CWA, long since abolished because it proved too costly and impracticable. Obviously former CWA workers who have obtained real jobs are included in the other two categories mentioned by Mr. Richberg. About 1,300,000 persons are still participating in the work program of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. In other words, they are working at odd jobs for the relief funds they receive. But it would require a long stretch of the imagination to include them among the reemployed.

One can scarcely read this final report without a feeling that the Executive Council has permitted its desire to compliment the President to influence its presentation of the facts. Coming at a crucial moment in this political season, the report takes on many of the characteristics of a campaign document. Of course, its actual value as a commentary on present conditions is correspondingly diminished.

New Savoyards.

Rupert D'Oyly Carte is the son of Richard D'Oyly Carte and the latter was responsible for Gilbert and Sullivan. Now the son has brought his own company to New York, where it is engaged in the delightful task of thrilling New Yorkers and visitors from the hinterland (including, we hope, many Washingtonians) with "The Gondoliers," "Iolanthe," "Trial by Jury" and "H. M. S. Pinafore." These operettas never seem to get old. Mention of them is bound to start one humming, or arguing. One of the more pleasant of indoor sports is debating the relative merits of the productions of Gilbert and Sullivan by Mr. Ames or Mr. Aborn. Now the true-hearted Gilsulvian will have to trot off to New York to hear the sparkling comedies all over again.

Richard D'Oyly Carte, himself a musician of talent, is recorded as the man who brought Gilbert and Sullivan together. He met Gilbert on the street one day and asked for a piece of drollery Sullivan might set to music. Gilbert had a libretto written for a manager, who had died too soon to produce it. It was shown to Sullivan who was delighted. Thus came about "Trial by Jury," which will be the present company's choice from Thursday through Saturday of this week.

It is interesting that the man who managed the temperamental pair through so many years is now succeeded by his son. If there is anything in family tradition the present company, here but a week from London, where it is well known and widely loved, ought to rank among the topnotchers.

What Gilbert and Sullivan wrote together is perhaps the finest monument handed down from Queen Victoria's day, as far as the stage is concerned. The timeless quality of their lovely music and what Brooks Atkinson calls their "well bred comedy" is something one never tires of wondering about. It is good to have these qualities revived again by able and eminent Savoyards as an opener to the present theatrical season.

Mile Posts

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

FIELD MARSHAL Sir John French, commander of the British forces, reported that the Germans were driven back all along the line, and that the British crossed the Marne and drove the Germans back 37 miles. Three million men were estimated to have been engaged in the battle, extending over a front of 100 miles.

IN THE MIDST of the European war Great Britain, France, Spain and China agreed to sign peace commission treaties with the United States, which would bring the total number of nations signing to 26. It was thought that one effect of the new conventions would be to prevent the United States from being drawn suddenly into the European conflict.

The Snob Spirit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of September 6, "Snob Spirit," you point out that "for years Americans sniffed at the works of art of American composers and painters. Nothing was acceptable without an European ticket." If this is now a thing of the past in literature, in music and in painting, it is still reigning supreme in interpretive musical art. Americans will still flock to hear a singer or instrumentalist with a name impossible to pronounce, despite the fact that some of our own are far superior.

Where is there a greater violinist in the world than the American boy, Yehuda Menuhin? Where is there a greater dramatic soprano in the world than our own Emma Redell? And yet the snobs right here in Washington have so far failed to bring us this great Emma Redell to be heard in her native city, as she has been heard all over the world.

I have heard it said that before Miss Redell returned from Europe, after she had been acclaimed in the leading opera houses for four years, after she had been heralded as the leading concert singer of Europe, she was implored by some of her friends to drop her American name and assume a foreign name. But she could not bear the idea of deceiving her own people, of cheating her own fellow citizens.

It is not what the audiences think, but what the managers assume the audiences think, that governs the type of artists we are dished out. Sir Henry Wood felt impelled to fool the people for their own good, and I would advise American artists to take note of that condition.

DONALD BROWN.
Washington, Sept. 6.

"Plainness Personified."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator J. Ham Lewis promises that before the November elections the President will clarify the New Deal situation and will explain how it matches up with the 1932 Democratic platform, "if any." This proves the matchless smoothness of the Senator in action, when confronted with a pair of tight shoes. "And upon this later declaration of the President, the candidates of Democracy, House and Senate, will have a clear position." Here is plainness personified. They will have a brand new platform, the President having meanwhile erased, by a soothing broadcast, besprinkled with "teeth and claws," all unpleasant memories of 1932.

And, pulling strongly on the oars, U. Sinclair, H. Johnson, J. Lewis, J. Farley, R. La Follette, H. Long, G. Pinchot, E. Thomas, et al., will shoot the Democratic shell over the line a good half-mile ahead of any other party. The Democrats surely think the people of the United States are boobs. Well, perhaps they are. If not exactly boobs—wandering very, very far from where they ought to be.

C. E. CARPENTER.
Rehoboth, Del., Sept. 6.

What Is Liberty?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why should New Dealers always interpret "liberty," when spoken of by Republicans, as meaning right of property and privilege to grind down the poor? Have they only this idea of liberty? Is it an attempt to divert the attentions of the voters from the Republicans' real objective until it is too late to escape from New Deal autocracy?

Every person who thinks at all knows what is meant by American liberty and they must know we are fast losing it under the New Deal. I suppose the New Dealers' idea of liberty is compulsion. We have all their acts to prove this. Would it not show more intelligence if they read all the points in Mr. Hoover's argument, and all those advocated by the Liberty League, and criticized, if they wished, but criticized what is written, not what "he must have meant?"

M. M. STOCKWELL.
Annapolis, Md., Sept. 5.

Somewhat Skeptical.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "By their deeds shall men know them." Coal barons who gained their wealth from men and women scratching out an existence in the dark depths of a living grave, a West Virginia coal mine; munitions mongers, perched high on mounds of skeletons, the monuments to their insatiable greed; champions of child labor and discredited politicans who think that their sense of importance has been destroyed: Oh! How they desire liberty!

Imagine this gang who represent special interests, crying "liberty." Check up on their record and their financial connections and the special interests they represent. Are you not surprised at the prolixity of their previous humanitarian efforts?

I don't think there are any Patrick Henrys among them. However, this league of special interests have carved their name indelibly on a long suffering people, whom they think will be moved by their crocodile tears shed in the name of "liberty." When the New Deal put the skids under their temples of gold; their cry of "wolf" is not so startling. When the President and his group of intelligent collaborators (as of the National Gallery in The Washington Post) put forth efforts to check greed and solve the problems of its results by statemenship, expediency and common sense; along comes the Liberty (?) League to retard our striving Government by coups de grace and push back the dawn of a new day under the name of "liberty."

The great objective behind the Liberty (?) League is to divert public attention and mold the minds of a dozing public (the composite of millions of believing souls) into the puppets of the Simon Legrees of the industrial stage.

The subtle devices of these Constitutional vigilantes are to get the public to think they are seriously concerned with the liberties of all the people; while they reorganize financial madness and legalized profiteering. Under the so-called old order of things (deceased) they could pillage and trade with the dominion of a Spanish buccaneer. The blood, muscle and sinew of the oppressed was the price; the gigantic dividends and salaries, the profits. They condemn everything as radical that interferes with their theory of government; which theory is based on plunder.

JOHN D. ARMSTRONG, Jr.
Washington, Sept. 7.

Hatters Case Recalled.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of your correspondents, Ex-Teacher, makes the suggestion that labor unions be required by law to incorporate. He also suggests that the A. F. of L. should take the initiative by voluntarily incorporating.

A corporation is defined in law as an artificial person, and it is responsible for its acts the same as a natural person. That the unions do not want. They would prefer to be simply associations. Anyone familiar with the famous Danbury Hatters case, about which every law student has read, will understand why the A. F. of L. and its affiliates do not want to become artificial persons responsible, as such, for their acts.

In the Hatters case the union fought for the closed shop. Strikes were called and the hat manufacturers were boycotted from coast to coast. Irreparable damage was done. The hatters sued the unincorporated union and got a judgment—against whom? Not against a responsible corporation but against every individual in the union, collect if possible.

No. The A. F. of L. will not voluntarily incorporate. The advantage the other way is too great. But, as a condition precedent to their enthronement as the unofficial allies of NRA, "they" should have at least been required to become "it"—an artificial person responsible, like other corporations, for its acts, and subject to regulation and investigation.

Discipline at Sea

By C. H. Wetmore.

IT IS SO easy to say, It might have been; so easy to point the finger at this and that and indicate flaws; so easy to criticize, that one often hesitates to join the ranks of carpers. But the present state of civilization has been built upon the mistakes of other generations, and errors such as made the Morro Castle holocaust a disaster of such magnitude should be analyzed and conditions corrected in order to make for safety in the future.

Peace-time disasters on warships have been far less than those on vessels of the merchant marine, this notwithstanding the fact that the former engage in maneuvers when the mistake in a signal might mean a collision endangering several thousand men, and the fact that on every vessel of any size are stored explosives which might destroy New York City.

That accidents in the navies have not been more frequent is due to the trained personnel and the discipline maintained on board ship. Let anything unusual happen on destroyer or cruiser and almost instantly every man is at his station, and officers and crew act as a unit until the error is corrected.

Had the men on the Morro Castle been trained as are sailors in the Navy and had naval discipline prevailed on that unfortunate vessel the loss of life would have been reduced to a minimum. One reads, in an account of the disaster, that an oiler, awakened by the alarm, called his roommates, who agreed with him that it was only a fire drill and so made no haste to dress and reach their stations. Again, it is passing strange to read a lifeboat reaching shore carrying one passenger; others who made port in safety were members of the crew.

The Morro Castle has been described as a floating palace. It was built for the comfort and luxury of those who travel over the New York-Havana route. Few ballrooms and dining salons could have equaled those on this vessel. To maintain this splendor required a large retinue of stewards, waiters, bus boys, cooks, pantrymen and dish washers; elsewhere on board were engineers, firemen, oilers, stokers; and, to swab the decks and polish the brasswork, a few men termed sailors. It is not to be expected that this heterogenous mass could be called upon to act as a unit against such an emergency as arose just before dawn on Saturday morning.

The horror off the Jersey coast should emphasize the necessity for a carefully trained, well disciplined body of men as a part of the crew on every ship carrying passengers. These men and their ability to act quickly in a crisis should be judged by steamboat inspectors at the port of departure, even as the inspectors judge loadings and the general condition of seaworthiness.

In the future, a photograph of 20 alert firefighters who will be on board ship probably would attract more passengers than illustrations in folders of de luxe dining salons and cabins.

The Post Impressionist

Hat-Check Girl.

Postoffice, Tuesday.

JARVIS had suggested dinner at a roof-garden. It wasn't until we were nearly there that we—the editorial "we"—noticed that he was hatless.

"Where," we ventured, "is your hat?"

He said, "I don't know. I don't usually wear my hat while eating."

"You might," we suggested, "keep your hat in your lap. You're a rather careless eater, and you could take the after-dinner contents home to Bismarck."

* * *

Bismarck is Jarvis' Great Dane.

* * *

"The real reason I didn't bring my hat," this forced Jarvis to explain, "is the hat-check girl."

"Any hat-check girl. All of 'em."

* * *

* * *

"For that's what it is," said Jarvis, "a racket—when it isn't worse. It's bad enough at the ordinary down-on-the-ground restaurant; up on a roof it's highway robbery. You may be able to get away from an ordinary ground-floor hat-checker for a nickel—if you're a good sprinter. But if you hand a roof-garden hat-check girl a dime, she's liable to call the manager. And what does a hat-check girl do for you?"

"Well," said we, "she—why, she takes care of your hat."

"Exactly!" Jarvis exulted, as if we had admitted something important.

* * *

* * *

"But, Jarvis," we protested, "she doesn't pretend to be insuring your life."

"Then why does she charge insurance rates?" he demanded: "The average non-Panama straw costs about five bucks—I'll bet you your winter felt you didn't pay two-fifty for that Lincoln Memorial you're wearing—and you buy it around the first of June and get out from under it September 15—15 weeks and 2 days. Cut out the two days, drop three weeks for vacation. Say, you lunch downtown every day except Sunday at 5 cents a check. And, say, you eat at a roof garden only twice a week, getting off at 15 per. Eight-ten to take care of a $5 straw!"

* * *

The elevator stopped. Jarvis, bare head held like a defiant battle flag, marched to a table. We sheepishly handed our "Lincoln Memorial" to the hat-check girl who alertly met us. She smiled. We thought she had a pleasant smile.

She certainly had a dimple.

* * *

"Now there you are," said Jarvis, when we were seated. "She's typical. Doesn't she look the racketeer?"

We said no, she didn't—not like our idea of one, though, of course, we hadn't Jarvis' large acquaintance with racketeers. She was a little, well-made thing in a neat black gown with white collar and cuffs and apron—just, as you might say, the suspicion of an apron.

"There's all part of the disguise," said Jarvis.

* * *

We called his attention to the fact that if she possessed a well-turned ankle, she also had a touch of gray—obviously premature, yet entirely frank—in her blue-black hair.

* * *

Jarvis laughed his scorn. "Because she has sense enough to know that people like you like it," he snorted. "Take a look around, then take a look at her: orange lights, a jazz band and a jazz tenor. She'd made up as the musical-comedy star soprano that's fooling the hero, all through the first act, by pretending to be the duchess' maid. She'd probably tell you she was a working-girl—but can you honestly connect her with anything serious in life? . . ."

* * *

Just to test Jarvis' theory, we gave her only a dime. And she said, "Thank you," in a very well-bred Surrey-Sussex sort of English. . . .

* * *

Still, perhaps it would have been a bit difficult to think of her as dealing with anything serious in life. . . .

* * *

We happened back alone next evening—no, not to see the hat-check girl. A shower caught us, really.

As we entered the hotel, the waiters were busy about the downstairs dining-room. However, as we saw the girl, we did make conversation. We said to her:

* * *

And we saw then that there was something queer about her eyes.

"I hope to God it does close the roof!" she said, and this time her English was that of Dublin.

* * *

"Why," we faltered, "what's the matter?"

She was crushing between her hands an envelope with a British stamp on it. "I couldn't stand it on the roof tonight!" she said. "It's me brother in the old country. Come October 1st, a year I've been seeing he got the best doctors in Dublin. I did think maybe I could do something to help him a bit. But here I get word tonight he died last week, God rest his soul!"

Barging Through Europe

With Carlisle Bargeron

Russia!

MOSCOW—All of the foreign correspondents; indeed, all of the foreign residents with whom I talked, agree that the Russian worker's lot is slowly, but steadily, improving. There is a considerable difference of opinion about the farmer, and unquestionably things are not moving in the agricultural sections as the government would like for them to. However, this is something I know very little about.

BARGERON

The worker's condition is better than it was under the czaristic regime, I am assured, and as I say, is moving forward, with heartbreaking slowness, but moving forward all the same. Not knowing prerevolutionary Russia I can only accept what I am told. But I can't help but wonder what, if there has been an improvement, could have possibly been the worker's condition before.

* * * *

"For that matter," some of the correspondents told me, "there has been improvement the past year, the past six months."

"Now in just what way?" I pressed.

As far as I was able to get was that with the beginning of the development of light industry—the second five-year program—the people are now finding it possible to get little odds and ends such as buttons for their clothes. I visited Russian homes, not the show places, but visits arranged through my newspaper friends. One home was of three rooms. In each room lived two families and the six families had a common bath and kitchen. These were delightful people, too, and while one could scarcely believe it under the circumstances, their quarters were immaculately clean.

Also I talked with some carpenters, skilled workers. They made 400 rubles or $10 a month. Incidentally, they insisted they made more and were better off before the revolution. However, they were by no means dissatisfied, but on the contrary, were quite hopeful of the future.

I would say that the hope the people have and the fact that they are being educated constitute the real contributions of the new government. The artists, while a privileged class under the new regime, do not think they are as well off as they were before the revolution, either. I am afraid, though, that in their case they do not appreciate their relative luxury.

The only evening clothes I have seen in Russia were worn by the performers at the opera. The foreign correspondents and members of the diplomatic set also wear them for entertainments given by the Russian Foreign Office. With these exceptions, shirt sleeves, or if coats are worn, no ties, are the order for every occasion.

* * * *

Moscow looks much better than Leningrad, or rather the people do, as one would expect of the capital. Some time ago, or at the beginning of summer, the government emphasized the need of neatness. The result is, or at least it is the case, the people here have effected a surprising neatness of appearance by wearing white simplicities, faded cotton dresses or onepiece, loosely-hanging wraps or something of the sort. Their shoes are white canvas shoes when they go in for real extravagance, otherwise they wear wornout slippers that seem to have been given to them by somebody. After Leningrad, however, they look dressed up.

I am told, and it must be a fact, that their condition is quite pitiful in the winter. They can't effect a neatness by wearing cheap, white or plain clothes then. They must really wrap up. They wrap their feet in rags, in croker sacks and whatnot.

The way they stare at the shoes of foreigners touches the heart. It is most difficult for one of them to stop long at one place outside his hotel or when not attended by his guide. Such a crowd will form, all staring blankly at his shoes, that it is with difficulty that he extricates himself. They do not say anything. They make no menacing move. They simply stare.

Labor Board Ruling Defied by Employer

Buffalo Firm Refuses to Bargain Exclusively With American Federation of Labor Union in Fixing Hours and Wages.

By Raymond Clapper.

A showdown over the powers of the new National Labor Relations Board is on the way, which eventually may call for a decision from the United States Supreme Court to determine how far the Federal Government may go in telling an employer how to treat with his workmen.

The Houde Engineering Corporation, of Buffalo, N. Y., gave notice yesterday that it would not comply with the recent order of the National Labor Relations Board requiring it to recognize an American Federation of Labor union and bargain with it exclusively in determining wages and hours.

At the offices of the Labor Board it was stated that the refusal of the Houde company, an automobile supply manufacturer, would be cited to other branches of the Government for appropriate action. The board may refer the case to the NRA or to the Department of Justice, or to both. NRA would have power to withdraw use of the Blue Eagle. The Department of Justice, if called into the case, would consider the question of prosecution under penalty sections of the recovery act.

The probability of a court fight going to the Supreme Court was evident in the comment of the Houde Co. as reported by the Associated Press from Buffalo:

"The opinion of the Labor Board lays down conclusions of law and rules of action that violate the constitutional rights of the company and of its employes and are directly contrary to the decisions of the highest courts of the land and the principles of law and the Constitution."

The question at stake is whether the Government may force a business man to engage in collective bargaining and to dictate the formula under which such negotiations must be conducted.

Violation Charged.

Ten days ago the Labor Board ruled that the Houde company had violated Section 7 (a) of the recovery act by interfering with the self-organization of its employes and refusing to deal with the United Automobile Workers Union, affiliated with the A. F. of L. The board officially notified the Houde company of its ruling, attaching the following warning:

"Unless within ten days from the date of this decision the Houde Engineering Corporation notifies the board in writing that it recognizes the United Automobile Workers Federal Union, No. 18339, as its employes' exclusive agency for collective bargaining and that, when requested by the union, it will enter into negotiations with the union and endeavor in good faith to arrive at a collective agreement covering terms of employment of all employes within the class which was permitted to vote at the election of March 23, 1934, the case will be referred to the National Recovery Administration and to the enforcement agencies of the Federal Government for appropriate action."

In the election referred to a majority of the employes chose the A. F. of L. union in preference to a company union as their bargaining agent.

Statement Probable.

At the Labor Board offices it was said a statement might be made today concerning the case, which is regarded as the most important one decided by the board in its 60 days of existence. The board rendered an exhaustive opinion in reaching its conclusions on the much-disputed question as to what Section 7(a) of the recovery act means.

The Houde company, as have many employers, has insisted upon being allowed to bargain with other groups of employes aside from the majority union. In this case the company proposed that it be allowed to deal with spokesmen of both the company and the outside union. This was permitted under the automobile strike settlement of last winter, but the Labor Board held that was allowable because the majority group consented to the arrangement.

Yesterday was the last day in which the company had to answer under the Labor Board's ten-day period. It sent a telegram reporting that it was sorry it could not comply with the board's decision and advised that a copy of a press statement being issued at Buffalo was being sent by mail.

Material Sales In Home Repair Drive Taken Up

Advertising Executives and Federal Housing Officials Confer.

Executives of 40 leading advertising agencies conferred yesterday with officials of the Federal Housing Administration to discuss sales campaigns for building material and other supplies needed in the home modernization and improvement campaign now going on.

James A. Moffett, housing administrator, said that industrial leaders have told him he could count on their continued efforts to push the program, which they all agreed is one of the most constructive activities that has been undertaken in years.

"Those industralists told me," Mr. Moffett said, "that the Federal housing plan offers the biggest potential market for labor and materials and general business stimulation the country has ever had. They all have definitely agreed upon the scope of the work they already have undertaken.

"Those men unanimously have told me that due to the depression, and because of the vast accumulation of work left undone and work to be done, the Federal housing plan offers to American business of every kind and type the greatest potential market in the history of the Nation. This potential market will be available for many years to come. Pushed to its fruition, the Federal housing plan definitely means the movement of goods of every description and men taken off relief rolls and put to profitable and permanent employment."

Albert L. Dean, deputy Federal housing administrator, in charge of modernization loans, explained the financial side of the program. He particularly emphasized that the entire program is based on private initiative, to be financed with private capital, rather than a program of Government spending.

Sedatives Blamed For New Disease As Doctors Meet

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—The newest and one of the most malignant of medical mysteries, called agranulocytic angina, was charged today to certain types of sedatives by Dr. Charles H. Watkins, of Rochester, Minn.

Dr. Watkins, speaking before the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology—the eye, ear, nose and throat specialists—summed up the results of several years' work by a number of investigators.

Agranulocytic angina, also called agranulocytosis and leukopenia, consists mainly of a deficiency of the granulocytes, one of the so-called white blood corpuscles. It is associated with ulcerations of the throat, increasing weakness and almost inevitable death. Most victims are women. The drug prevents formation of new cells by the body.

The idea that some of the sedatives sold without prescription in every drugstore and taken freely by women for headache, sleeplessness and the like was the cause of the strange malady was broached first by Dr. Roy R. Kracke, of Emory University of Atlanta, Ga. Since then a dozen physicians have contributed to the search and Dr. Watkins reported a series of 45 cases.

In almost every case the patient admitted taking some common sedative of the types based on barbituric acid. In some cases, cessation of the practice ended the disease. Not everyone is sensitive to the barbiturates, Dr. Watkins explained.

U. S. Seeks Trade Pact With Sweden

Parley Would Increase Nations Involved to Ten.

The State Department announced yesterday it immediately would negotiate a reciprocal trade agreement with Sweden, increasing to ten the nations with which the United States will soon seek new pacts in the hope of increasing trade, the Associated Press said.

The principal Swedish exports to the United States have been wood pulp, newsprint, iron and steel, matches, cattle hides and iron ore.

8 Heirs to Fight For Right to Gold Found in Cellar

Baltimore, Sept. 10 (Spl.).—Court action will be instituted this week by eight heirs of the late Andrew J. Saulsbury, former city councilman and silk manufacturer, for possession of $11,424 in gold found found buried in the cellar of his home.

The heirs, represented by Reuben Foster, of Ruxton, will base their claim to the money on the theory Mr. Saulsbury buried it during the depression following the Civil War, Mr. Foster said. He is a grandson of Mr. Saulsbury.

Two boys who found the buried pot of gold also have asked the court to declare them the owners of the fortune, and Judge Albert S. J. Owens has set a time limit of 90 days for the filing of additional claims to the money.

The Saulsbury heirs are the first to dispute the boys' claim to the money. Mr. Foster obtained a court order on Saturday naming him administrator of the Saulsbury estate in order that he might represent the heirs in the litigation.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

I MUST say this desk looks as if it had stood under a rock-slide of books. Away from it for two weeks, driving 2,800 miles, and getting stung while at the wheel by two wasps at once, there's been time for the first fall publishing rush to get a bit ahead of me.

THEO. HALL

So, for a few days, let me merely list the back books with the most laconic comments. Some are just too good to treat so cavalierly. These I'll set aside for better mention later on.

* * * *

"Lightship," a novel by Archie Binns (Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.50). A heads-up, masculine tale of nine men—and their life stories—who are stationed on a lightship off the Pacific Coast. By a man with seawater in his blood—second cousin to that Jack Binns who sent the first radio S O S. Rates A-1.

* * * *

"Broken Music," a novel by Morna MacTaggart (Dutton, $2.50). This fine, sensitive story of an English girl who marries a German and goes to live in his country won't make much noise, but it deserves your best attention.

* * * *

"The Foundry," a novel by Albert Halper (Viking, $2.50). The author of "Union Square" writes of his days in a Chicago electrotype foundry. More mention later.

* * * *

"The Second House From the Corner" (Dutton, $2.50). Max Miller's impressions on becoming a home-owning burgher. Californians hail the author of "I Cover the Waterfront" as a genius of the first rank—he is an able and rather sentimental reporter.

* * * *

John T. Flynn's "Security Speculation: Its Economic Effects" (Harcourt Brace, $3). A studied, documented attack by the ablest critic of the stock exchange. Worth a column next week.

* * * *

"Beauty for Sale," a novel by Ethel Hueston (Bobbs-Merrill, $2). The heroine was born in an Iowa parsonage and named Elysia, and she grew up to have wealth bow before her innocent feet. Is that enough?

* * * *

"Full Flavour," a novel by Doris Leslie (Macmillan, $2.50). Four generations of a London tobacco business, and a grand woman who lives through it all. Splendidly done. We'll look at this again.

* * * *

"Capt. Nicholas," a picaresque comedy by Hugh Walpole (Doubleday Doran, $2.50). Mr. Walpole is hugely successful with his tale of a genial scoundrel in the London society of our time.

* * * *

"The Harvesting," a novel by Irving Bacheller (Stokes, $2). The author of "Eben Holden" returns to the North Country with this pleasing, homespun story of a young lad who sings his way along the road.

* * * *

"None But the Brave," a novel by Marguerite Mooers Marshall (Doubleday Doran, $2). Young love fighting the depression in New Hampshire, by the well-known woman's columnist of the New York Evening Journal. Inspirational, but still good.

* * * *

"Heart Be Still," a novel by Isabel Wilder (Coward-McCann, $2). Small college town life, by the author of "Mother and Four" and the sister of Thornton Wilder. More later.

* * * *

"Impersonation of a Lady," a novel by Maude Parker (Houghton Mifflin, $2). Lively and amusing tale of a social feud between women in a small town, by the woman who explains High Society to the readers of the Satevepost.

* * * *

"Wayne of the Flying W," a Western by Arthur Henry Gooden (Kinsey, $2). She was a lovely hoyden and a ranch heiress, and he was her father's enemy, and it all comes out right as rain.

* * * *

"The Mutiny of Madam Yes," a novel by Dale Collins (Bobbs-Merrill, $2). Rather bumptiously sexy comedy about a woman and a ship's crew on the London-India run, interesting because she is something over 18 and 120 pounds.

* * * *

"The Woman He Chose," a mystery by J. H. Wallis (Dutton, $2). The youthful Iowa lawyer gets his pretty client acquitted of murder. Then he marries her, and things begin. High-tension yarn by a rising young man from Dubuque.

* * * *

"A Thesaurus of Slang," compiled by Howard N. Rose (Macmillan, $1.75). An entertaining, but underdone, little collection of class jargon from aviation through college and underworld to war. We'll have some fun with this later on.

* * * *

"The Triumph of an Idea: the Story of Henry Ford," by Ralph H. Graves (Doubleday Doran, $1.50). A brief, well-illustrated eulogy, with especially fresh material on the V8, and Dearborn, "the Wonder Town." Marred by the author's going out of his way to pile on the contemporary history at every turn—thus, when Czar Nicholas and his family were murdered at Ekaterinburg, Mr. Ford advanced his minimum wage to $6 a day. No relation, obviously, is meant, but this book jumps blithely from a carburetor to the Peace of Versailles.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

That Book-List Again.

Some time ago I published the leading names on a list of books recommended to college students by a group of instructors in English; and this selection attracted so much attention, and drew so many requests from my readers for the entire list, that I make no apology now for giving the thing in its complete form.

The list was prepared under the direction of Prof. Atwood H. Townsend, of New York University, and is a result of the combined votes of 33 college instructors. The committee of college reading of the National Council of Teachers of English is responsible for the survey.

What seems a little unusual in the year of grace 1934 is the large number of books by George Eliot, the inclusion of "The Last Days of Pompeii," and of "Hypatia" and "Westward Ho," by Kingsley, but the list speaks for itself. Here it is, with the respective votes given to each book.

Crows Seem Ugly to a Crow That Thinks It's an Eagle

By Robert Quillen.

Mrs. Brown was an unhappy woman. Like many another in this amusing land, she felt that she had been cheated when she was led to the altar.

Not that Mr. Brown failed in any of his marital duties. He was a good provider; he had no vices; he was meekly obedient. In fact, he was an ideal husband insofar as he had the matter under his control.

But he was old. He had not seemed too old before or immediately after the wedding, but the waning of the honeymoon found him disposed to enjoy life by his fireside instead of gadding about. His idea of a pleasant evening was to insert his feet in bedroom slippers and his nose in a book.

Furthermore, he had a little paunch and he was graying a little and balding a little. Mrs. Brown sighed or frowned when she looked at him.

Mrs. Brown herself was no child. She confessed to 29 winters, but catty friends remembered that she had spent her girlhood in Miami, which doesn't have any winter.

Her figure pleased her. True, she wore frocks so tight that they gaped between buttons, and a woman doesn't do that unless she is trying to fool herself.

But when she examined her reflection in the bathroom mirror, she said to herself: "How nice I am. These bony and meatless girls are all angles. I am the full-blown rose—a woman in her prime."

She felt wasted. She felt that she deserved a young man who could appreciate her. She hungered for romance.

And when she looked at unromantic Mr. Brown, she thought: "He doesn't realize how mismated we are. If he could see himself as others see him, he would realize how I suffer."

Feeling sorry for herself like that, Mrs. Brown decided to go adventuring in search of romance. And then at a dance she saw her dream man—a tall, blond with curls and magnificent shoulders who radiated youth and vitality. She adored him. She exchanged words with him. Nothing remained except to let their friendship ripen.

And then, watching him from behind a palm 10 minutes later, she heard him say to another youth: "Who was that fat old dame who tried to get kittenish with me?"

WILL OF A RUGGED INDIVIDUALIST UNDER THE NEW DEAL.

I, Jonathan Doe, being of sound and disposing mind, do hereby declare this my last will and testament, revoking all other wills made by me:

Paragraph 1—To my wife, Penelope Doe, I give and bequeath any coins, tokens, greenbacks, &c., that may be in my possession at the time of my decease, leaving the same to her unreservedly and apologetically. I also give her all my pawn tickets, I. O. U.'s, mortgage certificate bonds and railroad stocks, knowing they will be of value only as keepsakes.

* * * *

Paragraph 2—To my oldest son, Luke, I give and bequeath my rose-colored glasses. He will need them.

I also give him all my barometers which were so helpful to me during the Big Blow, my navigating instruments and rainbow finders in the belief they will continue to be essential for some time to come.

I bequeath him all the codes, revised codes, modifications of codes, together with all interpretations of the same, and all my correspondence with Federal bureaus, commissions, brain trusters, lawyers, &c. I further give and bequeath to him the autographed tomahawk presented to me by the Great White Father of Hyde Park and the rare set of twentieth century solid oak "cracker-downers" used on me by Gen. Hugh Johnson in his various crack downs.

Paragraph 3—To my son, Wingate, I leave my collection of Blue Eagles, my umbrellas and a photo of our home in the Pretornado Ers, with a description of the garage and barns and the spare-tire holder off my old imported limousine as a souvenir of the good old days. I give and bequeath to him my yacht cap in which I was so carefree and happy up to 1929, and I leave him also all my common stock certificates with electric lighter attached, my stock in the Primrose Lane Country Club, now defunct; a painting of my factory now in the hands of the Administration, and a copy of "My Country 'Tis of Thee" for voice and instruments.

* * * *

Paragraph 4—To my son, Chidsey, I leave my files containing a record of all disagreements with NRA administrative boards, my system for comprehending the incomprehensible, and all my headache powders, bandages, liniments, restoratives, &c., collected by me under the New Deal. I also leave him my silver aspirin bottle, the phonograph record, "Love Thy Neighbor," and a letter of introduction to the board of managers of the County Home.

* * * *

Paragraph 5—To my daughter, Parchesi, I leave my 6-year-old roadster (with no gas), the collected works of Upton Sinclair, Huey Long's "Life of Huey Long" and Dr. Warren's "Thesis on Currency Management," or "Where Am I?"

* * * *

Codicil—To my son, Benton, I make no bequest whatsoever, as he is a poet and dreamer, and, as such, conspicuously fitted to succeed in the new scheme of things without any assistance from me.

Drought Brings Smallest Corn Crop Since '81

(Associated Press.)

The drought's ravages in Midwestern States were told even more graphically yesterday with publication of the Agriculture Department's estimate of a 1,484,602,000-bushel corn crop, the smallest since 1881.

August rains came too late to save corn, but did bring a marked improvement in growing conditions in the sun-parched States from Minnesota and Nebraska southward. Late growing crops were greatly benefited, the department said.

The total wheat crop was estimated at 493,285,000 bushels. The spring wheat yield was placed at 92,763,000 bushels, or 32.1 per cent of normal. No apprehension over possible wheat shortage was felt, however. The department said that with supplies on hand ordinary requirements could be met.

Grape Tonnage Cut.

Estimates for buckwheat, rice, peanuts, apples, pears, potatoes, sweet potatoes, sugar beets and onions all were above those of a month ago. The forecast for dry beans was only slightly lower and the only important food crop reduction shown this month was the 11 per cent decrease in the estimated tonnage of California grapes.

"On the whole," the department said, "National supplies of principal food crops, if closely utilized, should be sufficient for ordinary requirements."

Combining the estimates for 33 of the principal crops, indications are that yields per acre will average 13 per cent less than last year and about 22 per cent below the average of the last 13 years.

"Total crop production appears much lower than in any year since the beginning of the World War," the department said.

Pastures Hit Hard.

Pastures were the poorest on record for September 1, but they were expected by the department to show some recovery. So far as surface moisture is concerned, the department said, conditions for seeding winter wheat are vastly improved in the main winter wheat belt.

From the eastern counties of the Dakotas and Colorado westward the drought has not been broken and in most of this area, except on the Pacific Coast, it is too late to expect grass in pastures and ranges to make much growth this fall, the department reported.

Allowing for the heavy reduction in corn etimates and for slight changes in prospects for oats, barley and grain sorghums, the department said, production of these four feed grains combined would total 55,000,000 tons—34 per cent below 1933 production and 46 per cent below average production in the last ten years.

"The hay crop," the department said, "is estimated at 56,000,000 tons, which would be only 75 per cent of the quantity harvested last year and about 67 per cent of the average tonnage harvested during the preceding ten seasons.

Acute Feed Shortage.

"Far less straw and corn fodder were grown than in any recent year but close utilization may increase the quantity consumed by live stock. An unusual quantity of Russian thistles, weeds and coarse forage of all kinds is being stacked and, in the drought areas that have had grain winter grains and late forage crops are being planted for fall pasture.

"On the whole, however, it is increasingly evident that an acute shortage of both feed grain and roughage is now unavoidable, though, of course, feed requirements and death losses will depend in part on the mildness of the winter.

"The total quantity of grain, mill feeds and concentrates that will be available for feeding live stock in the United States during the current 12 months, July 1 to June 30, now appears to be about 62,000,000 tons. Last year about 87,000,000 tons were fed.

McLemore Named For Roanoke Cases

The first three defendants are charged with shortages and the latter in connection with perjury and the subornation of perjury.

9-11-34

Strange as it seems, you can light an electric lamp with an ordinary match—and you can blow it out like you would blow out a candle. The process employs the "electric eye," a special electrical tube which is sensitive to light.

When a lighted match is held up to the sensitive tube it causes the tube to complete a circuit. This circuit is amplified by another special tube, similar in many respects to the tubes that amplify sound in your radio. The amplified circuit passes through an ordinary electric light bulb, lighting it.

To blow out the electric light you just blow out the match. When the match goes out, light ceases to fall on the "electric eye," and the circuit is broken just as completely and as quickly as you can snap out the lights in your own parlor.

This strange apparatus has no practical application in itself, but it was perfected by the GE laboratories as a simple demonstration of the many uses to which the almost magic "electric eye" can be put.

One of the strangest mines in the country is the gold mine located in the back yard of the abandoned United States Mint at Carson City, Nev. The gold there is mined second-hand, for the pay dirt consists of sweepings, ashes and other debris from the old mint.

Reds Foment Strife In Filipino Labor

Manila, Sept. 10 (AP).—Believing an organized outbreak of violence was threatened by extremist labor elements, including strikers, Communists and dissatisfied farm laborers, Philippine authorities took steps today to forestall it.

Philippine constabulary and Manila police were directed to be on the alert. Many detachments in Manila and the suburbs increased the number of their sentries.

Police said there was evidence that "tangulans," comprising dissatisfied farm laborers mostly north of Manila, were planning to cooperate with Communist sympathizers in an attempt to seize police stations.

Youell, have been exceptionally well managed. The State convict road force has been capably managed, and a very keen eye is focused upon the operations of the camps."

The report revealed that the penal system carries on its books accounts totaling $12,776.20 in the names of escaped and dead prisoners. All the accounts date back several years and probably never will be claimed, the report pointed out.

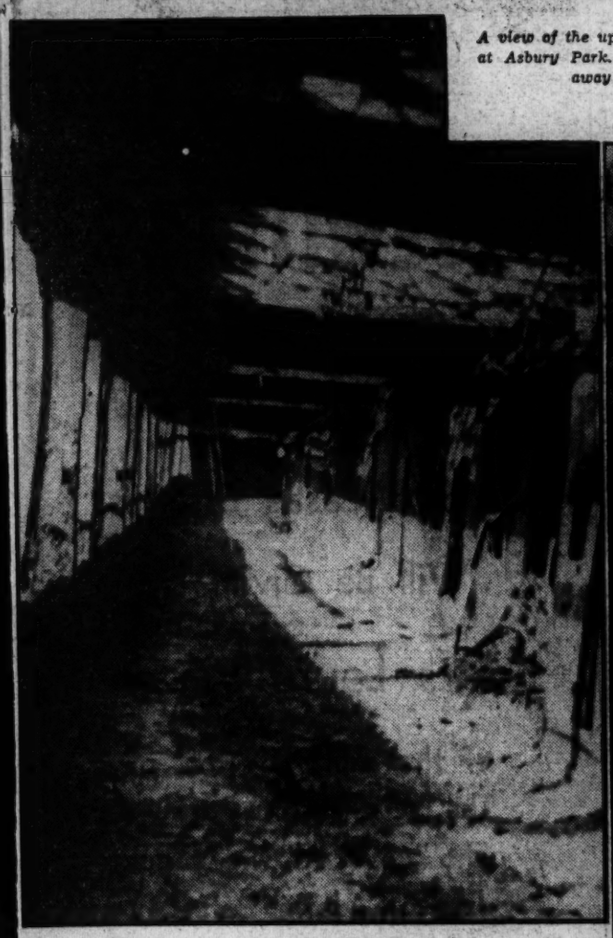
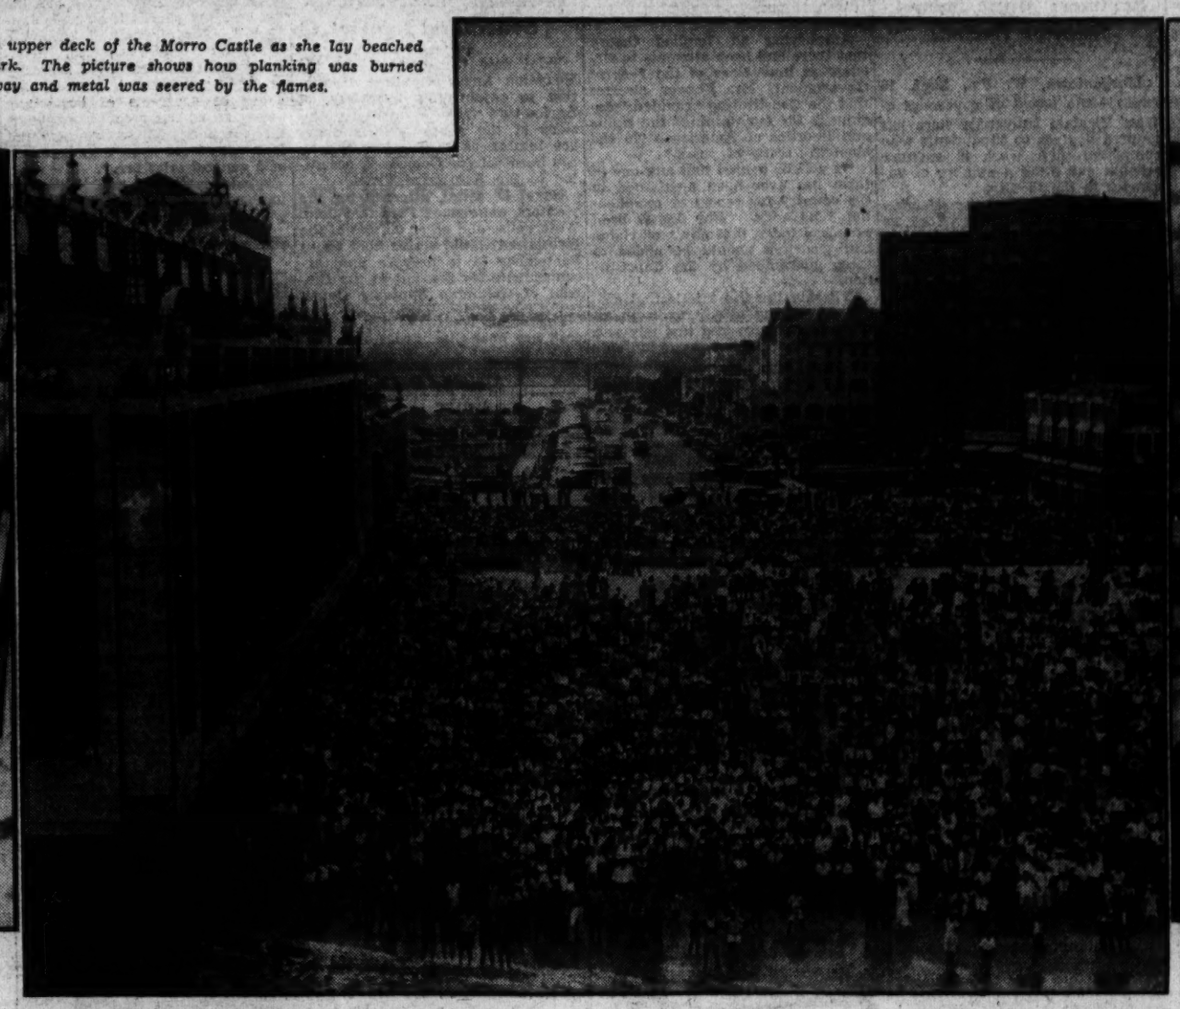
Exclusive Post Pictures Show Havoc Spread by Fire on Liner

These remarkable photographs were taken exclusively for The Post by Harris B. Hull of The Post staff. Hull boarded the Morro Castle by way of a breeches buoy. He was one of the first newspapermen at the scene of the tragedy Saturday morning and one of the first to take pictures of the wreck after it had been towed to Asbury Park.

A life boat, wrecked by fire. The boat is swinging from a davit at one end, but the other end is hanging free, indicating that an attempt had been made to lower the boat but that it had to be abandoned because of the fire.

A view of the upper deck of the Morro Castle as she lay beached at Asbury Park. The picture shows how planking was burned away and metal was seered by the flames.

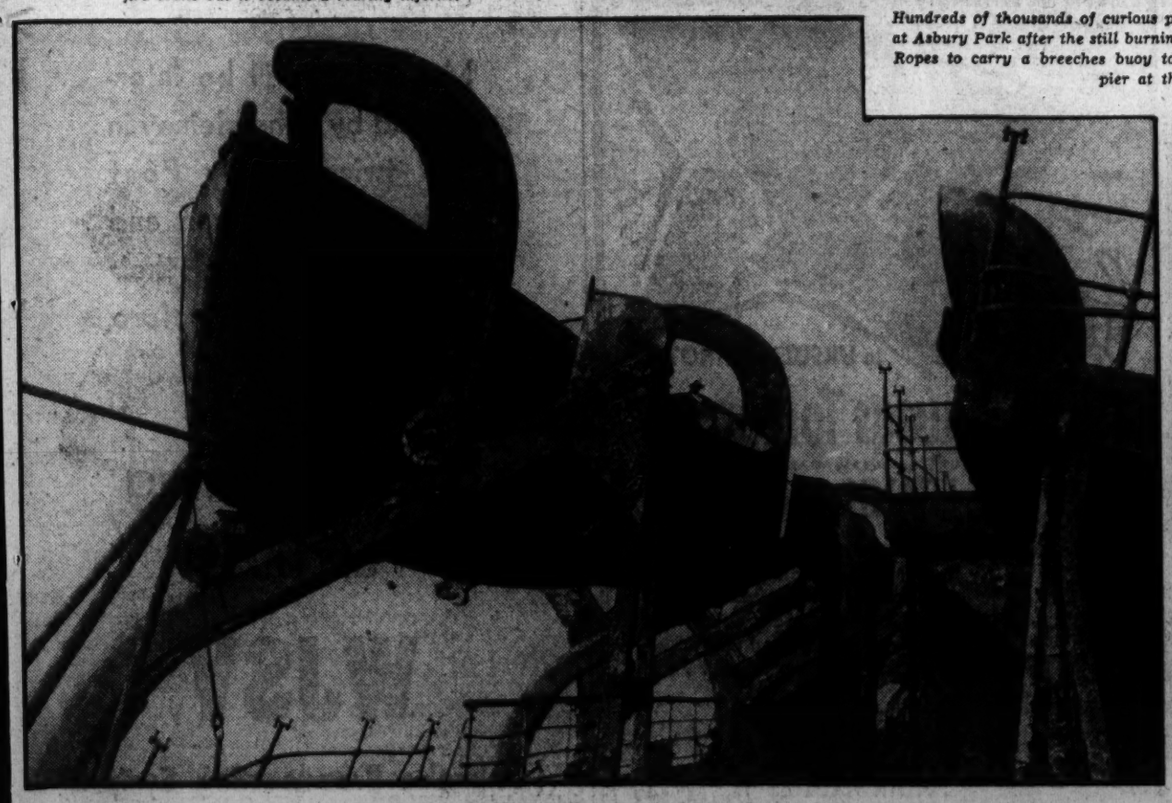




Along this promenade deck Saturday night gay crowds were gathered, celebrating the last night at sea. A few minutes after the fire broke out it became a roaring inferno.

Hundreds of thousands of curious persons gathered along the beach at Asbury Park after the still burning Morro Castle was run aground. Ropes to carry a breeches buoy to the boat were fastened to the pier at the left.

A trooper looking through refuse on the deck for bodies of persons still reported missing. It is believed that more bodies will be found in the boat below decks.



This lifeboat tells a mute story. Burned by the roaring flames, it has not been swung overside. Evidently the fire was so fierce in this section of the liner that no attempt could be made to use the boat that might have saved the lives of many passengers and members of the crew.

Another general view of one of the decks of the Morro Castle, showing the tremendous damage done by the fire. Smoke and flames still came from the hold, heating the remaining sections of the deck so hot that the reporter's shoes were scorched.

Prince Georges Set to Register Voters Today

Two Hot Contests Seen in Primary Ballot Test Tomorrow.

Prince Georges County registration officers yesterday took the oath of office at Upper Marlboro in preparation for the opening today of 34 county precinct polling places.

Registrations begin at 9 a. m. and close tonight at 9 o'clock. Voting for the primaries will begin tomorrow at 7 a. m.

With an unusually large vote expected throughout the county, especially in the metropolitan area, intraparty factions yesterday girded themselves for a fight to a finish.

Followers of Harry Nice, Baltimore lawyer and gubernatorial candidate, charge that Dr. Thomas E. Latimer, chairman of the Republican State central committee of the county, issued an "instruction card" improperly favoring Senator Goldsborough.

The card, according to George Merrick, formerly acting chairman of the committee, was signed by Dr. Latimer, which gave the impression that all the candidates he listed had been indorsed by the committee. Senator Goldsborough, however, is the only candidate to be indorsed by the county Republican committee.

Mr. Merrick admitted, though, that the Nice followers had also issued an "instruction card" carrying the names of candidates not carried by Dr. Latimer's ticket.

Probably the hardest fight, and by far the feature of tomorrow's voting, will be between Robert W. McCullough, Cheverly attorney, and State's Attorney Alan Bowie for the nomination as party candidate for the office of State's attorney.

Both men claim a majority vote, especially from districts located in the metropolitan area. Mr. Bowie has been indorsed by the Democratic State central committee, while Mr. McCullough is running independently.

Candidates in Nearby County

Harris & Ewing Photos.

Around these two men, State's Attorney Alan Bowie, of Brandywine, Md., left, and Robert W. McCullough, Cheverly, Md., attorney, will center the main Democratic fight when Prince Georges County voters go to the polls for the primaries tomorrow. Both are running for State's attorney.

Virginia Relief Officials Plan To Kill Cattle

Rockingham Will Graze and Feed More Than 1,000 From West.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.). While Rockingham farmers are signing to graze and feed more than 1,000 cattle from the drought-stricken areas of the West, Virginia emergency relief officials are going ahead with plans to slaughter and can relief cattle already here.

Secretary Russell L. Stultz, of the chamber of commerce, has been informed that plans for a Federal relief meat-canning plant here are making rapid progress. The slaughtering will start on a small scale and work up to a 50 or 100 head a day capacity. Of the 14,000 cattle received so far, approximately 60 have been found diseased after tests made by veterinarians from the West Virginia Department of Agriculture, he said, and these were immediately segregated, condemned, slaughtered and buried in lime.

NRA Policies Emulate Reds, Hoover Avers

Free Thought Repression Laid to Bureaucracy in Latest Attack.

more and more legislation. Power is the father of impatience with human faults, and impatience breeds arrogance. In their mass action, they become the veritable exponents of political tyranny."

Relief and reform measures are excluded by the former President from his discussion of regimentation and he terms "absolutely necessary" changes in laws regulating banking, markets, transportation, public utilities and natural resources.

"Hard Horse to Ride."

"So long as these revisions," he writes, "conform to the conditions of liberty, there can be no difference of opinion except as to method. But we must remember that reform is a hard horse to ride in the blinding storm of World War liquidation."

Linking regimentation, Fascism, Socialism and Communism in a discussion of these systems' effects on "representative government," Mr. Hoover declares:

"The whole fabric of popular election, of separation of executive, legislative and judicial powers, and of the separation of National and local responsibilities, is integral in the American system. No one will doubt that pure Fascism and Communism can exist only under the abolition of every vestige of democracy.

"The illusion is that the institutions of popular government will not become mere ghosts under continuation of even partial regimentation or Government ownership and operation of competitive businesses. We should examine this illusion with care, for a destruction or weakening of the vitality of the protections of our liberties is the sure highway of liberty itself.

Sees Peril to Liberty.

"Regimentation invades the spirit if not the letter of the Constitution and becomes a transformation of government to the point where the citizen is entirely subjective to the State."

Amplifying an implied theory that there had been attempts to circumvent limitations of the Federal Government, Mr. Hoover stresses that the Constitution provided "machinery for maintaining" the rights and liberties of Americans "in the changing scene of years."

"It will be denied that any one of them has ever been mentioned in the country for repeal or modification," he adds. "Nor has it been proposed today that any new rights and securities should be added to those guaranteed by the Constitution.

"Therein lies the intellectual dishonesty of the attack upon them. If we have discovered that any one of these liberties is not our individual endowment by the creator, the right thing is to propose a change in the Constitution and allow us to examine it, not to extinguish it by indirection."

Asserting "free speech and free press have never lived long after free industry and commerce have been repressed," Mr. Hoover adds "managed opinion is as much a part of 'managed economy' as 'managed currency' and 'managed agriculture.'

Propaganda Developed.

"Bureaucracy has already developed a vast ramifying propaganda subtly designed to control thought and opinion. The constant use of the radio, the platform and press by device of exposition, news and attack with one point of view becomes a powerful force in transforming the Nation's mentality and in destroying its independent judgment.

"Bureaucracy's instinctive defense to criticism is to color the information and news with its objective rather than presenting a cold analysis of results. It goes further in resentment to criticism and attempts to meet it with denunciation.

"We witness this vituperative impatience from those who believe they are serving the common good. Critics are smeared by personal attack upon character or motives, not answered by sober arguments. . . . All this is the back door to repression of free thought and opinion."

Nuisance Tax Nets Treasury $471,452,000

(Associated Press.)

The Congress to be elected in November will face the task, when it assembles in January, of renewing or finding substitutes for a large number of so-called "nuisance" or temporary taxes levied in 1932.

These taxes, according to the fiscal report of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, brought into the Government's coffers a grand total of $471,452,000 in the year ended last June 30.

To fill such a hole in the Government's revenues a general sales tax is being talked of again on Capitol Hill, where a few Representatives and Senators still linger during adjournment.

Many Articles Taxed.

These manufacturers' excise and miscellaneous taxes, generally included under the label of "nuisance" items, are levied on gasoline, motor vehicles, tires, tubes, motor car parts and accessories, electrical energy, lubricating oils, toilet preparations, candy, chewing gum and soft drinks, articles made of fur, matches, jewelry, mechanical refrigerators, sporting goods, radio sets, malt, wort, grape concentrates, firearms and cameras, checks, admissions and club dues, telephone, telegraph, radio and cable facilities and pleasure boats.

Collections from these sources last year were $148,204,000 more than the year before.

Gasoline yielded the heaviest return on a 1-cent-a-gallon tax—$202,000,000. The tax on motor cars, accessories and tires was the next heaviest producer, yielding more than $70,000,000.

Some Receipts Decrease.

Only the receipts from admissions and club dues and from pleasure boats declined, the tax from admissions and dues declining by $1,600,000, and the receipts from the boat tax declining by $59,000.

Of these taxes, those on candy and soft drinks were terminated last May 10 with passage of the 1934 revenue act. The tax on pleasure boats was ended last July 1, and the tax on bank checks is off next January 1. The others will terminate next July 1 unless renewed.

Although faced with the necessity of finding increased revenue because of prospects of continuing heavy relief and recovery expenditures, the Administration may not look with favor upon the suggestion of a general sales tax.

A sales tax which might raise living costs and reduce consumption would run counter to Administration policies, many observers believe. These policies have looked to increasing purchasing power and consumption.

Living Cost a Problem.

With NRA costs and processing taxes already having resulted in higher prices, and now with the drought making itself felt by the consumer, the Administration has its task cut out in preventing a soaring cost of living, in the view of these observers.

Rather than accept a general sales tax, the Administration may submit proposals for a general overhauling of the Nation's tax structure, with the purpose of stopping loopholes and eliminating double tax burdens. A committee of tax experts appointed by Secretary Morgenthau has been at work on the problem through the summer.

Highway to Aid Charlottesville

Skyland Drive Expected to Bring Tourists.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.). Considerable interest is expressed here in connection with the opening of Skyland Drive later this month.

Verbon E. Kemp, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce here, points out that the new highway has for its southern terminus Swift Run Gap, 23 miles from here over the Spotswood Trail and Route 29. That many additional visitors to Monticello, Jefferson's home; Ash Lawn, Monroe's restored mansion; the University of Virginia, and other places of historical interest will follow this course may reasonably be expected, Mr. Kemp said.

It is said that a group of leading citizens here pledged the first money for the creation of what is now the Shenandoah National Park. This group is now engaged in seeking a further extension southward of Skyland Drive.

Women Begin Drive Against Indecent Films

Protestant Groups to Seek 50,000 Signers to Pledges.

One hundred and twenty-five women representing as many Washington Protestant churches, in cooperation with the Washington Federation of Churches, yesterday began their drive to secure 50,000 signers to pledges supporting clean and wholesome moving pictures.

At the close of a gathering at the First Congregational Church the women received the pledge cards which they will take to their individual churches. The pledges declare:

"Recognizing the importance of motion pictures from an educational and moral viewpoint, I promise to cooperate with the Washington Federation of Churches and other interested groups in their efforts to bring about the showing of only such films as are clean and wholesome. I shall not attend any performance without first trying to determine its character. If I see an indecent motion picture I shall consider it my duty to discourage my friends from attending it."

Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Federation of Churches, and Wilbur La Roe, local attorney and member of the District parole board, were the principal speakers at the meeting.

Other speakers included Mrs. F. A. Linzel, Mrs. William T. Bannerman and Mrs. Claude Keiper. Mrs. W. O. Tufts was chairman of the committee in charge of the meeting. She was assisted by Mrs. Linzel, Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, Mrs. G. R. Wilhelm and Miss Barbara Staples.

Review Held At Ft. Myer For Poloists

Mexican Officers Here for Series Honored by Troops.

Gen. and Mme. Limon Feted at Tea Dance After Ceremony.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Almost every day there is some entertainment for the members of the Mexican army polo team which will compete with the United States Army team in Washington on September 19, 23 and 26. Yesterday afternoon there was a garrison review, mounted, of the Sixteenth Field Artillery and the Third Cavalry, at Fort Myer, Va., in honor of Brig. Gen. Gilberto Limon, president of the Mexican Polo Federation, and the officers of the Mexican army polo team.

Following the review Gen. Limon and his charming wife were escorted to the post headquarters, where they were entertained at a delightful tea dance.

The "hop room" of the post has recently been in the hands of a few energetic wives of Fort Myer officers, and yesterday they had finished the first steps in the great transformation of the hall. The walls and high vaulted ceiling have been repainted a soft sage green, and draperies of deep wine-colored rep lend a cheery note to the room. Comfortable chairs, convenient tables, and reading lamps make the room most home-like.

Room in Mexican Colors.

The post orchestra played for the dancing. A tea table near the entrance was decorated with red and white flowers and green candles—the Mexican colors. Mexican, United States and post flags added to the general color of the room, and the young officers of Fort Myer in their uniforms of khaki, or of white, mingled with the dashing young Mexican officers in their darker olive-drab.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. J. L. Devers headed the receiving line, acting as hosts in place of the commanding officer, Col. Kenyon Joyce, and Mrs. Joyce, who are absent on a vacation. Mrs. Devers wore a frock of tile red crepe with a smart black tafetta jacket and hat to match. Others in the receiving line were Gen. and Senora de Limon, the Military Attache of the Embassy and Senora de Azcarate, the Counselor of Embassy, Senor Dr. Don Pablo Campos-Ortiz and Senora de Campos-Ortiz, and the members of the Mexico polo team.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. James Duke, Mrs. John W. Davis, Mrs. Harold W. Blakely, Mrs. W. H. Cobern, and Mrs. Alexander Cooper, all wives of officers stationed at Fort Myer. Members of the younger set of the post assisted and did much to entertain the visiting officers.

Georges Attend.

Pretty Miss Anne George, the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Charles P. George, who were formerly stationed at Fort Myer, was a busy hostess. Miss George wore a smart semisports frock most becoming to her golden-brown hair and deep suntan. With her father, the popular "Toddy" George, who arrived at the dance late in the afternoon, Miss George has been in the Capital for several days, having come from Nantucket, where Mrs. George remained until today. Col. George and his daughter have been stopping with the latter's grandfather, the former Vice President, Mr. Charles Curtis, and will leave tomorrow by motor for San Antonio, Tex., where Col. George will be stationed at Fort Sam Houston.

Mrs. George will sail tomorrow for Galveston, and thence to Fort Sam Houston.

Capital society, as well as that at Fort Myer, misses the Georges who had been stationed in and around Washington for a good many years. Col. George was one of the members of the United States riding team and was frequently to be seen at the rides at Fort Myer.

Virginian Acts As State Head; Ends Old Era

Mr. Moore First From State to Hold Post in 91 Years.

For the first time in 91 years, a Virginian has filled the office of Secretary of State.

Years ago Virginia had a monopoly on the State department as in consecutive order her sons, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe and John Marshall each held prominent offices in that division. Since Abel Upshur served as Secretary of State in 1843, no native of the Old Dominion occupied that high office until the past week, when the important State department negotiations, including the Russian debt conference with the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky, have been in the hands of the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. R. Walton Moore, of Fairfax, Va., who in the absence of Secretary Hull has been acting Secretary.

Yesterday Mr. Moore was relieved by Undersecretary William Phillips, who returned from the Four Nations celebration at the rededication of old Fort Niagara.

Secretary and Mrs. Hull will return to their apartment at the Carlton Hotel today by motor, after spending several days in New Jersey. Last month the Hulls, with their nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hays, of Staunton, Va., went to a camp in the mountains for an indefinite stay.

The Secretary returned from camp to confer with the Cuban delegates, who came to Washington to sign the first trade agreement between Cuba and the United States, and later returned with Mrs. Hull for their "off the record" vacation "somewhere in New Jersey."

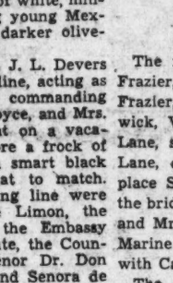
A Sure Thing for the Defense.

In yesterday's article I discussed the necessity, if the defeat of opponents' contract seems to depend entirely on keeping Dummy out of the lead and if doing this requires that your partner hold a certain card, of playing as if partner held that card, even when the chance of his holding it appears very remote. Fortunately, it is often possible for a defensive player to be certain that a particular play will ostracize Dummy no matter what Declarer or partner may hold. In the following hand there is only one contingency that will defeat the contract if East makes the proper play—West's holding of a void in diamonds and Declarer's holding four; and this possibility is very remote:

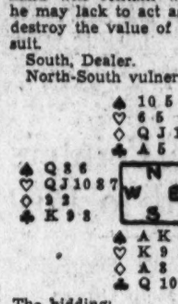


South, whose hand is, of course, hidden, is Declarer at three notrump; West opens the heart Queen. East must take this first trick with the Ace of hearts and lead back the King of clubs as fast as he can get out of his hand. The lead of this King will effectually kill any hope Dummy may have of retaining a side entry for the diamond suit. If Dummy's low club is played, East simply continues a club and the Ace is forced to win. If Dummy's club Ace wins the first trick, the entry is immediately gone. After this, East has an easy time in shutting out the diamond suit, because he simply refuses to win his diamond Ace until the third round (unless West signals that it is safe to win the Ace on the second round by playing "high-low").

The play shown above is marked, and East has no choice but to play his defense correctly. It is not nearly so easy when East does not hold a diamond stopper, although the play should be made in any case on the chance that West may be able to shut out the diamond suit, or that South may possibly hold the singleton Ace. Of course, in most cases South will hold the club Queen, and East, by leading his unsupported King, will sacrifice a club trick. Only the most short-sighted of players would ever consider this, however, because by giving up one trick East is probably saving four or five others.

At times two defensive leads are required to kill an entry in Dummy, and for all the defender may know there is no chance of killing it; nevertheless he must make a valiant effort and hope that his partner's hand will contain whatever cards he may lack to act as stoppers and destroy the value of Dummy's long suit.

South, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1NT	Pass	3◇	Pass
2NT	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Here the contract is likewise three notrump by South, with the Opening lead of the heart Queen being made by West. East must take the Ace and lead a club. In all likelihood South, for his three-notrump bid, holds the club King and the diamond Ace as well. But possibly West holds either the club King or the diamond Ace. If the former, Dummy's entry will immediately be removed. If it is the diamond Ace which West holds, South can win the first lead of clubs and save Dummy's Ace, but now West will get the lead with the diamond Ace and lead a club, removing the Ace from Dummy, and East will still be able to stop the diamond suit so that it can not be used.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Perhaps with greater skill and insight than any other man in his profession this gentleman caters to feminine whims with his products. Each new one is another triumph.

This time he scores with an exquisitely perfumed powder of exceptionally fine texture. Next time it will be—well, nobody knows.

The powder, available in four scents, comes in a unique metal box of bright enamel in white, black, red, green and blue with alternating gold bands, surmounted by his distinctive crest and, incidentally, harmonizing with his lipsticks and compacts.

Looking through the plate glass into the showcase which holds these lovely things one is first impressed with a wealth of color, and then the richness of the aristocratic boxes. When their covers are removed one peers through an opening at the lovely contents, powder-like pulverized clouds, in many charming shades ranging from light to dark.

The "rachel" is one of the most captivating in all the beauty mart. One reads of a complexion-like magnolia leaves or the color of old ivory. When one uses the delicately tinted "rachel" the skin becomes a combination of magnolia and ivory loveliness.

Now here's the climax of this newest beauty serial. The powder already in these magnificent boxes costs less than you'd dream. And after that, refills cost half the first price.

Coaxing Gold Into Your Hair.

One of the surest and safest ways to bring out the gold in your hair is by using a certain lemon rinse. A tablespoonful in the rinsing water adds bright lights to dull, dark hair, and gives blonde hair a spun gold effect.

It is put out by one of the best chemical firms in the country and is absolutely reliable. It offers a splendid means to those with unattractive, mouse-colored hair to brighten it up a bit.

Soap Cloths for Travelers.

A certain sponsor of many charming gift suggestions toasts the traveler—not with a goblet of sparkling wine, but with something infinitely more practical—a small travel package containing five soap cloths.

"These are not for stay-at-homes," she says. "I have other cloths, much larger, for them. This small pack is designed for the convenience of the woman who travels. It is for the woman who is fastidious about her personal appearance, and wishes to chase the grime of the road by means of these delicately perfumed and soap-laden cloths."

Aid for Oily Skin.

Skin types fall into three definite classes: Dry, oily and normal. Of the normal, it is necessary to say but little. Of the dry much was said yesterday. It is the oily which is the present subject.

Just as one beautician worked long and laboriously with her chemists to perfect a sure remedy for dry skin, so has another worked in the same wise to find some means of correcting an oily one.

The result of her long efforts has just taken its place on the store counters. It is a cream "designed to firm loose skin and remove that withered look that comes from over exposure in the sun." It is primarily to reduce coarse pores, refine the texture of the skin, to smooth out lines and to normalize an oily skin.

Just as a dry skin is most susceptible to wrinkles, an oily complexion is the catch-me-all of blackheads and prone to develop large pores. Unless the skin is carefully cleansed first, and then the pores closed, it will continue to collect blackheads, which in turn will enlarge the pores. The astringent power of this cream tightens the skin, closes the pores and tends to improve the whole contour of the face.

Mirrors for Make-Up.

Bargains in make-up mirrors are bringing customers by the dozens to a downtown store. These little aids to artistic make-up are round, with a metal attachment which may be used as a prop or a handle. One side is a plain mirror and the other side is a mirror with magnifying powers which enable a person to apply mascara and eyeshadow in a most exact manner, to blend rouge and powder easily and to put on lipstick in a perfect Cupid's bow. For plucking eyebrows it is a prime essential. Such a mirror has a hundred uses. It sells for 39 cents.

Colonial Glassware.

A great many brides have gotten off to a splendid start with a few early American pieces for their apartments. Of course, they'd like to carry the Colonial idea out in its entirety but they find that real hobnail and waffle design glassware is a little hard on their budgets.

A local shop meets their needs and desires in a highly satisfactory manner with some glassware in Colonial patterns which costs, oh, so little. Glass-covered candy dishes, large sandwich trays, fruit bowls, and numerous other types sell from 39 cents up.

The Below Recipes for Oysters Supplement Contest Ideas.

By Susan Mills.

OYSTERS are back!

With the arrival of the month with the "r," one of the most delicious delicacies puts in an appearance.

Oysters on Toast.

One pint of oysters, chop fine and season with salt, cayenne and nutmeg. Melt 1 tablespoon of butter in a saucepan and stir in minced oysters. In a separate dish, beat up yolks of 2 eggs with 1 gill of cream and stir in with oysters. As soon as eggs set, serve on slices of buttered toast garnished with parsley.

Deviled Oysters.

Take 1 pint of oysters and chop fine. Put into saucepan with 1 teaspoon of melted butter and gill cream. Season with cayenne and salt, add ½ cup rolled cracker crumbs. Put on stove and allow to simmer 5 minutes, stirring gently. Then put in baking dish, sprinkle bread crumbs and bits of butter over the top and bake until top is rich golden brown.

Old Style Roast.

Put 1 pint of oysters in deep tin. Season with salt, cayenne and 1 teaspoon finely chopped onion. Place thin slice of bacon on each oyster, sprinkle grated Parmesan cheese over the top and bake. Garnish with parsley and serve with slices of lemon.

Oyster Chowder.

Chop 50 good sized oysters. Prepare 1 cup finely chopped celery and 2 cups of cold boiled rice. Put layer of celery in bottom of saucepan, then layer of rice and layer of oysters.

Season with salt and pepper. Repeat these layers until all materials are used. Pour over 1 cup of boiling water. Cook slowly for 25 minutes. Beat up yolks of 2 eggs with 1 cup milk; add this to chowder; stir carefully for few minutes and serve hot.

If You Have Suggestions That'll Help Others, Send Them In.

MORE HINTS for the housewife. When there are ways of making housework easier, everyone wants to know and profit by them.

Mrs. M. L. Turner, Berwyn, Md., has a few good ideas. When whipping cream, she says, add three or four (not more) drops of lemon juice and the cream will soon become thick. Also, to peel oranges easily, pour boiling water over them, and let stand five minutes.

From Mrs. Mary Duvall, Edmondston, Md., we have the following hints: Egg stains can be removed from silver spoons with common table salt. Leather chair seats may be revived by rubbing them with well-beaten egg-white.

When darning woolen materials, use human hair. It will make the mend almost invisible, and is as strong as thread. Mrs. H. H. Smith, 3435 Quebec street northwest, finds this a practical hint.

What about your ideas? Let other housewives share your short cuts to homemaking. Address all contributions to Susan Mills, The Washington Post.

Legitimate Stage Revival Forecast

Sybil Thorndike Sees Gain at Expense of Films.

America and England will have a great revival of legitimate stage productions within the next decade, predicts Sybil Thorndike, who arrived in America recently for the opening of her new play, "Distaff Side."

Miss Thorndike, who has three decades of acting in classic tragedy, farce and melodrama on the English stage behind her, and who was recognized by the British royal family and given the title of Dame Commander of the British Empire, has refused all motion picture offers.

"The cinema has no soul," she says. "But the true show is a delicate, lovely thing. And what I say is that, as compared with the cinema, your real theater is the very finest art, in which the commercial aspect is not the first aspect. It is my feeling that the movies have taken away from the theater those masses who want to sit effortless in a theater and just stare. I say there has never been any real place in art for such people. In the real theater as much is demanded of the audience as of the cast. Many of the younger generation have sensed this. That is why there will be a great theatrical revival."

Whisky Held Insomnia Remedy, for Imbibers

The whisky nightcap, regarded with such disfavor by prohibitionists, gets a gobd word from Lord Horder as being a splendid cure for insomnia, in a paper read by him to the British Medical Association's recent conference.

Remorse, fear, love, anger, sorrow are the chief causes of sleeplessness, he says, and a mild drink before going to bed will do much to erase these emotions from the mind and so produce sleep. He deplores giving this treatment to the teetotaler to whom alcohol is a stimulant.

"But for the person accustomed to taking alcohol it is equally crude to deny it at the end of the day."

How Will You Have Yourself? Choose Neckwear Accordingly

Some of the New Types Will Give You New Moods; They'll Set Up Your Old Dress as if You'd Fed it a Fall Cocktail.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Fashion is certainly doing her best to make you "feel like a new woman" this season, particularly by the many types of neckwear which are so smart, and designed to make you feel prettily feminine, pertly boyish or crisply tailored, as you will.

And it isn't all done with the usual white neckwear, either. Color is an important part of the fall neckwear picture.

Striped materials, such as velvet or ribbon, are putting the gay touch around smart necks. So are plaids and brightly metal-shot fabrics. Satin is an effective shining contrast for a dull-surfaced fabric dress.

Crisp White.

Most of the crisp, tailored vestees, revers and gilets are white, to be sure. Because there's a tailored crispness to white no color seems to equal.

And there's still enough white to suit all those well-dressed women who always prefer it under their chins. In fact, many of the prettiest, most feminine pieces are at their best in white, as, for example, the soft lace collar illustrated at the top in the sketch.

These lacy pieces, of course, are just about the most dressy and feminine type you can wear, and Chantilly type lace is a favorite for them. Often the lace is combined with satin, as in this sketch. Can't you imagine how rich it would look on a simple black dress, especially black velvet?

If you're aiming to make one of your dark summer dresses go along with you into fall, there are numerous pieces arranged so they can be fitted to lower necklines. One such, another soft, feminine type, is shown at the center in the illustration. In satin or metallic cloth this would give a dress a very new, fall look.

Covering the Front.

There are other types, too, cut to cover almost the whole front, which cover up any kind of neckline with an impenetrable disguise.

When you're feeling boyish, select something similar to the piece shown in the sketch at the bottom. There's color and gayety for you, along with the crispness and flatness that go with boyish costumes.

Or try one of the new Peter Pan collars that ends in an Ascot tie. Or a collar which opens in wide points like a man's sports shirt and finishes off with a pert bow. Any of them are guaranteed to give you that "new woman" feel and look.

Neckwear of the type described is available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

"I WISH you would write an article on the practice of letting children 'cry it out' in the belief they are indulging temper," writes Mrs. Anna Powers, of 1321 M street. "More often the child is in agony from strained muscles, staying too long in one position, on a hard and lumpy mattress. I can appreciate this the more after a short stay in the hospital, where if my bell wasn't immediately answered when I wanted to be turned I felt like screaming aloud myself. Children ought to be turned often, picked up and laid down again, the covers straightened and a drink given.

"Sometimes the light is too strong, there is no air circulating, any number of things will cause a child to cry, and I think it is cruel for mothers to let their children be so tortured by accepting the advice of others not to handle the child too much."

Mrs. Powers has stated the case so well that little is left to be said on the subject. I agree with her, for there is all the difference in the world between spoiling a child by pampering him, and making him so comfortable he won't want to cry. Often, when a small baby begins to whimper, changing his diapers, turning him on his side will make him so contented that he falls asleep instead of crying. There's a happy medium between sternness and coddling.

(Thursday: Booklets on Babies.)

Other mothers are invited to submit their suggestions for the care of children. Address Alice Fox Pitts, in care of The Washington Post.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Mme. Curie and Radium.

Less than 40 years ago, A. Henri Becquerel, then professor in the Paris Ecole Polytechnique, discovered that certain substances possessed radioactive properties. They produced an effect upon a photographic plate similar to that of sunlight. Through the use of uranium salts Becquerel was able to photograph the shadow cast by an aluminum plate. Later the mineral pitchblende was found to possess the same properties as uranium.

Becquerel interested Pierre Curie and his wife, Marie, in the phenomenon. They secured a ton of pitchblende (the mineral source of uranium) from the Austrian government, and through an exceedingly laborious chemical process succeeded in extracting what is now known as the element radium. In 1903 the Curies shared with Becquerel the Nobel prize for the discovery of radioactivity. In 1911 the Nobel prize in chemistry was awarded Marie Curie.

In 1906 Pierre Curie was accidentally, killed and to his post in the Sorbonne his wife succeeded him. Her recent death recalls our debt to the Curies for their outstanding contributions relative to the properties and uses of radium. It was not long before it was found that cancerous growths on the skin responded readily to the destructive action of radium. Then followed years of experimental work through which it was determined that not only skin cancer but malignant growths within deeper tissues would yield at least in part.

The world's supply of radium is approximately 20 ounces, and of this amount nearly eight ounces are owned in America. Because of the vast amount of labor involved in extracting this rare element the price is high. One-thirtieth of an ounce is priced at approximately $50,000. Radium-containing ores occur in the United States, chiefly in Utah and Colorado.

For use in the treatment of cancer radium is converted into a salt of the metal, usually the bromide, and is then sealed in platinum containers. These in turn are inclosed in either rubber or aluminum boxes.

Radium must be carefully protected, not only because of its great value, but because of its danger. Radium burns can occur just as readily as burns from X-ray or a hot iron. They are often deep and are slow to heal. Before we learned how to handle radium, and the same was true for X-ray, many pioneer workers in the radium field died as a result of cancer originating in tissue burned with radium. Furthermore, radium causes marked destruction of the blood cells of the body with resulting anemia, and it was this slow progressive anemia, no doubt caused by her exposure to radium, that finally claimed the life of Marie Curie.

Fortunately for progress in radiology, the daughter of Pierre and Marie Curie, Irene, and her husband, F. Joliot, are carrying on investigation and adding new laurels to those already achieved by the Curie family.

French Chefs Lose Prestige To Americans

In Ten Years Cooks Will Seek U. S. Masters, Food Expert Says.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 10 (Spl.).—French cooking may be slipping from the throne of preeminence it has held for so long, according to a recent survey made in connection with the Modern Kitchen Congress, to be held at L. Bamberger & Co., here on September 10, 11 and 12.

French cuisine may be supreme now but in ten years French chefs will come to America to learn the secrets of American cooking, said George Rector, food consultant of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.

The world travelers polled on the subject of the nationality of fine foods gave Scandinavia a big vote and said favorable things for certain specialities in China, Italy and South America.

George Palmer Putnam, writer, publisher and big game hunter, considers the Eskimo diet "the quaintest he knows." He is fond of narwhal skin, "hung until it is pleasantly disintegrated."

Blair Niles, author and explorer, recalled flying fish served on the menus of Barbadoes, the rijst-rabel of the Hotel des Indes in Batavia, tortillas and tamales, "delicious in most Spanish-American countries," and particularly "in a tiny inn at Tzanjuyu on Lake Attilan in Guatemala." She also remembers breadfruit in Demarara in British Guiana and "a moonlight night in Jamaica when we sat in a garden and ate soursop ice cream—a dish long to be remembered." She also likes raw fish as the Japanese serve it with sey sauce, the iguanas of Mexico, "like frogs' legs," and Virginia batter-bread served with broiled quail.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

If September 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m., and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m.

Two very important factors to success should not be ignored on this date, prudence and thrift. If you should disregard them in your business transactions you may keenly regret doing so in the near future. Tyrannical influences might try to dominate certain actions or activities in which you may be engaged, but firmness and self-assertion should enable you to handle any such situation, if it arises. Coolheadedness will be a desirable trait to exercise on this date, so it might be wise to watch your temper carefully. Money affairs possibly may seem complicated, but if handled tactfully may be straightened out in a thoroughly satisfactory manner. In social activities be cautious you do not force attention on a person who might become easily embarrassed by having too much of a fuss made over him. Married and engaged couples, as well as the earnest seekers for love, will display wisdom and avoid trouble, if they forbear from displaying any form of arrogance or conceit on this date.

If a woman and September 11 is your natal day, all you require to be very successful in any line of deavor you undertake is energy and persistency. Guard against becoming fickle, let loyalty become almost a pet obession if you wish for good fortune where love is concerned. Music, art or literature should offer you unlimited opportunities, providing you are willing to sacrifice pleasure and leisure on the altar of the god of work. Money should come to you in abundance. Marriage should prove to be the best thing for you and helpful, should you select a career. Environment means a great deal to one of your temperament.

If a child is born on September 11, usually when it reaches its teens, it shows a decidedly artistic temperament. Its formative years may require careful guidance and its efforts must be directed in the line in which it displays the greatest interest.

If a man and September 11 is your birth anniversary you may find it difficult to avoid letting yourself form the habit of taking life easy. Talented and versatile, if you apply yourself to your work and do not permit yourself to be distracted by outside interests, you can gain for yourself a recognized place in society and financial independence. Domestic life should bring you a great deal of happiness. A wife, through cooperation and advice might prove the stimulus you need to enable you to get your best results.

Successful people born on September 11.

William S. Macy, artist.

Felix Grundy, jurist and statesman.

Henry C. Bowen, merchant and editor.

Isaac Roberdeau, engineer.

Sarah Bache, philanthropist.

James Brown, soldier, Senator and judge.

Man Who Read Weather Forecast in Onion Dies

Ewald Benesch, famous "onion" weather prophet of Marschfield, Wis., is dead, the Associated Press reports. He was 69 years old.

Each New Year's Eve Benesch would go alone to the basement of his cobbler's shop, and by the light of a solitary candle would cut apart onions until he found one suitable for his strange prophecy.

By studying 12 circles of the onion he would foretell the weather for the coming year during the last half hour of the old year and the first half hour of the new. His predictions won for him a Nation-wide reputation.

HUNDRED GRAND

By Erle Stanley Gardner

The story has only just begun, with the following developments occurring in the first two chapters:

Annette Morton, adopted daughter of the C. Harvey Mortons, and Sylvia Galen, Mrs. Morton's social secretary, have been kidnaped. The world at large does not yet know of the kidnaping, and even Carlton Lanlic, young criminal attorney, who is engaged to Sylvia, is ignorant of the crime. He is waiting for her in a cabaret, where she had a dinner engagement with him. Jimmy Cordell, gangster, is one of Lanlic's clients. He recently has sent a woman who is in his employ, Minnie Duggan, to Lanlic to retain his services in finding the child she deserted at birth; Cordell's motive in this maneuver is disclosed in today's chapter.

SEATED in the cabaret, Lanlic impatiently consulted his watch. At fifteen minutes after eight he went to a telephone and called the Morton home.

A masculine voice said, "What is it and who is it?"

"I wish to talk with Miss Galen if she's there," Lanlic said.

"She isn't here."

"Can you tell me when she left?"

"Who is this talking?" asked the voice.

"This," said Lanlic with some dignity, 'tis Mr. Lanlic. I should very much like to know when Miss Galen left the premises. She was to meet me at 7:30 for dinner, and she hasn't as yet appeared."

"I'm sorry, but I can't help you," said the voice.

"Who is this talking, please?" Lanlic inquired.

"This is Mr. Morton's new butler."

"May I speak with Mr. Morton?"

"I'm sorry, but Mr. Morton isn't feeling well. I'm taking all messages for him."

Cordell Appeared.

Lanlic grunted a comment beneath his breath and slammed up the telephone. He looked once more at his watch, and frowned thoughtfully, staring at the street doors at the bottom of a flight of carpeted stairs. While he was watching the doors, they pushed open and Jimmy Cordell, accompanied by One-Thumb Loretto and Manley Sarcon, his two bodyguards and lieutenants, entered the place.

Cordell raised his eyes and saw Lanlic standing at the head of the stairs. He grinned a greeting.

Lanlic nodded and looked past him to stare anxiously at the door.

"What's the matter?" Cordell asked when he reached the top of the stairs. "Looking for some one?"

"Yes," Lanlic said, almost absently.

"Pleasure or business?"

Important Business.

Lanlic sighed and said omniously. "You're the second guy within the last five minutes that has asked a lot of questions that were none of his damned business."

For a moment green anger glittered in Cordell's eyes; then he laughed and nodded to his two lieutenants.

"Stick around, boys," he said, "I want to talk with Lanlic. Come on, Lanlic, I want to ask you something."

"Come on, Lanlic," Cordell said, "snap out of it. This is important. It's a matter of business. I came up here to see you about it on purpose."

Lanlic's eyes snapped to focus on the gangster.

"How did you know I was here?"

"A little bird told me."

"The trees seem full of little birds."

Cocktails Ordered.

"Aren't they?" grinned Cordell. "Come on, sit down and have a drink and snap out of it."

Lanlic permitted himself to be escorted over to a table, where Cordell ordered cocktails and glanced around him at the tables with seeming carelessness, carefully scrutinizing all of the diners. Then he hitched around so that he faced Lanlic.

"I'm in a funny position, Lanlic," he said.

"What is it?"

"I've got a chance to make some money. It may be some big money, but I'm afraid it's going to be too hot to handle."

"Don't handle it then."

"What a big help you are."

Lanlic laughed and said, "I'm sorry, Cordell, but I'm worried tonight, and I don't know just why. I'm irritated and I don't like to talk business outside of office hours."

"Hell," Cordell said grimly, "any one would think you was a corporation lawyer. You're in criminal law, my boy, and you've got to talk business when the business comes up to be talked about. This kind of stuff doesn't keep."

"Go on," Lanlic told him. "What is it?"

Big Snach Case.

Cordell said slowly, his fingers twisting the stem of his cocktail glass as he talked. "I've got an opportunity to act as intermediary in a big snatching case. The snatchers have got to have some one in whom they've got absolute confidence to contact the parents. At first I told them nothing doing, then they put it up to me cold turkey. They've got the kid, and if they can't arrange to get ransom they're going to kill her and the woman that's with her. The only chance to save their lives is to get ransom money. Getting ransom money isn't going to be so easy. The folks are willing to pay it all right, but somebody's tipped off the authorities, and they're sewing everything up. The newspapers will be on the street with it inside of half an hour."

"You're in direct touch with the kidnapers?" asked Lanlic, his eyes showing interest.

"How the hell do I know?" Cordell inquired irritably. "I've been approached, that's all."

Must Have Proof.

"You can't act as intermediary until you can convince the parents you're in actual touch with the kidnapers," Lanlic said slowly. "The minute you do that the authorities are going to grab you for questioning."

"These kidnapers are too slick for that," Cordell said. "They're getting in touch with me indirectly. I don't know whether the persons I was talking with were the ones who made the snatch or not, but they want me to open up negotiations through some person who's got the contact."

I see," said Lanlic slowly. "They're going to have you get in touch with some one, and that some one get in touch with the parents. Is that it?"

"I think that's about the size of it. What do you think of it?"

"It's dangerous. How much is in it for you?"

"Plenty."

Too Dangerous.

"You can't do it, Cordell. You know as well as I do there won't be anything in it for you, except a percentage of the ransom money. The minute you do that you become an accessory to the kidnaping charge. You have got to leave it alone."

Cordell raised green eyes from an inspection of the cocktail glass.

"Jeez," he said. "I hate to have that kid murdered. She's just a little innocent thing that doesn't know what it's all about, and is crying to go home to her mama."

"You asked me for legal advice," Lanlic said. "I'm giving it to you."

"I could," Cordell said slowly, "get Judge Karpin to put up the front. He's respectable enough so that no one would suspect him. You could have the contact with him and I could have the contact with you. Then I could get in touch with the snatchers."

Judge Would Refuse.

"That's pretty complicated," Lanlic said, "and I don't think Judge Karpin would do it."

"Judge Karpin would if it was put up to him right."

Lanlic frowned thoughtfully.

"Who's the child?" he asked. "I hadn't heard of any big kidnaping case."

The green eyes were boring steadily into his.

"Annette Morton," Cordell said slowly. "And," he added, "the report I have is that Mrs. Morton's social secretary was with the kid at the time of the snatch."

Lanlic's eyes showed torture. He gripped the side of the table.

"Jimmy," he said slowly, "I want that child back, and I want Sylvia Galen back."

Cordell nodded.

"Wanting," he said, "isn't going to get them back."

Must Get Them.

"You're going to get them back," Lanlic said.

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean that you've got an organization. You know the organized underworld as few men know it. That wasn't any amateur crime. That was a professional job. You can find out who did it. I want you to do it, and I want you to get busy."

Cordell's tone was petulant.

"Now let's talk sense about this thing," he said. "I don't know who did it, and I don't know as I can find out. I'm in a hell of a spot on it myself. I've got a chance to pick up some change. While I'm doing it I may stumble onto the real snatchers. If I do I'll promise to communicate with you. How'll that be?"

"I want more than that, Jimmy."

"I can't give it to you."

"You could if you want to badly enough."

Cordell lost his temper.

In Bad Spot.

"The hell I could!" he said irritably. "Do you know the kind of a spot that I'm in on that snatch? Well, I'll tell you something now, mister: Annette Morton is an adopted child. Her real mother is Minnie Duggan, who's tied up with me. I'd had my men working on it for three months before I dared to make a move. I made the first move when I sent Minnie to you to have you make an independent investigation. I know in advance what the investigation is going to show. I didn't let her know that I knew it and I didn't let you know that I knew it. But the thing's mathematical. It can be traced by the records."

"That wouldn't make any difference, Jimmy," he said. "There was a legal adoption. Even if it is true, Minnie Dugan won't have any rights."

Minnie Doesn't Know.

Cordell sneered.

"Hell," he said, "do you think Morton would stand on legal rights if he realized the kid he and his wife had become so attached to was the daughter of a moll? Hell, he'd pay, and pay through the nose. It would have been a veritable gold mine. And now some one has to snatch the brat."

Lanlic got slowly to his feet.

"If Minnie is the girl's real mother," he said, "she can be counted on to help."

"She doesn't know it," Cordell said.

"She will know it," Lanlic promised him grimly.

"I wouldn't do it, Carlton. You're monkeying with dynamite. You don't know what you're getting into. Let me play the thing my way. I'll start acting as intermediary. Somewhere along the line I'll find out the real snatchers. When I do, I'll turn my men loose on them. We won't show them any mercy. We'll get the woman back and we'll get the kid back. I promise you that."

Press Hears All.

Lanlic moved almost mechanically toward the exit.

"Can the thing be kept out of the newspapers?" he asked.

"I think so. For a while at least. But you can't tell about the newspapers. They have lots of ways of picking up information."

There was a moment of silence as the hat-check girl turned to the rack. In that moment of silence, as the music of the orchestra died away, the cries of the newsboys could be heard from the street below:

"Extra! Extra! All about the kidnaping! Millionaire's daughter kidnaped from downtown streets. Read about it. Extra! Extra!"

"That," he said, "is that."

Professor Lists Famous Lunatics

Great Figures of Ancient World Included.

A list of famous lunatics has been compiled by Dr. E. W. Twitchell, clinical professor of Neuropsychiatry in the University of California. It includes kings, queens, artists, writers and actors.

Among those listed are: Nebuchadnezzar, Paul, Cambyses, king of Persia; Diogenes, the Roman Emperors Commodus, Caligula, and Heliogabalus; Juana, queen of Spain, known as Crazy Jane; the Russian Czar, Ivan the Terrible, Paul I of Russia, George III of England, Ludwig II of Bavaria, William Cowper, the poet; Mary Lamb, sister of Charles Lamb; Edgar Allan Poe, Van Gogh, Dutch artist; John Wilkes Booth and John McCullough, actors.

"The true artist," says Dr. Twitchell, "is supposed to have some little mental twist. Other men must be up to a certain standard daily, otherwise their usefulness soon ends. The production of an artist is uneven. He may produce feverishly for awhile and then be non-productive for a considerable period."

'Hula' Hair Loses Job at Harvard

Waitress Quits Rather Than Iron Out Curls.

Because they thought her natural waves and curls made her look "too much like a hula hula girl," Miss Kathryn Warner, who was employed as a waitress at the Harvard Union, freshman dining hall, was ordered by authorities to take the natural wave out of her hair.

That was too much and she quit, she told representatives of the Associated Press.

"They told me I must find some way of slicking my hair down on my head," Miss Warner said, "so I got another job."

Miss Warner's experience in feeding the Harvard youths three times a day seems to have disillusioned her. For in her opinion the Harvard men are not so "wonderful," after all.

"But then some of them were awfully nice, too, such as young Franklin Roosevelt, the President's son," she said. "He's a wonderful fellow, so courteous and considerate, and not the least superior in his attitude. He asks for what he wants in a gentle voice, and never makes any cracks like some of the boys. All the girls think he's just grand."

Polo Ponies And Children Held Alike

Both Possess Personality and Understanding, Says Amateur Trainer.

By Elizabeth Young.

HORSES are a great deal like children. They have personality, understanding, excellent memories, emotional reaction to human beings. Like children, they can be educated and disciplined if rewarded by love and praise for right conduct, and briefly but decisively punished for wrongdoing.

"Let a smart horse get away just once with something he shouldn't have done, and he'll try it again, the next time with greater determination. I've never known it to fail," says a woman who familiarly knows and loves both horses and children. They are an intimate and indispensable part of her daily existence.

She is Mrs. Ruth McEvoy Dean, whose vocation is wife of Dr. H. Trendley Dean of the U. S. Public Health Service, and mother of three daughters, Ruth, 12; Dorothea, 10, and Mary Harriet, 7. Her avocation is the amateur training and daily exercising of polo ponies.

Why polo ponies?

"I prefer to work—or rather, associate—with polo ponies in preference to any other type of horse because they have so much personality and intelligence," Mrs. Dean explained. "They seem to sense what is in one's mind even before it is indicated."

Ponies Gravitate to Her.

A trim figure in white polo breeches and dull gold sweater which subtly flattened her curly, short-cropped chestnut hair and sun-browned skin, Mrs. Dean relaxed in a wing chair at her pleasant home in West Falls Church, Va., and reflected on her remarks.

She was dressed for her morning exercise of a privately owned polo mount she is keeping in condition for an officer at Fort Myer. Because she so loves horses, they are always effortlessly included in her scheme of things, although it is years since she has owned one. They simply seem to find their way to her hand. She is one of the few amateur women trainers of polo ponies in the East.

"But don't say I'm a trainer of polo ponies," she pleaded, denying a fact which her friends and her performance affirm. "If you must say something, say rather my hobby is exercising polo ponies. I don't do it for pay, but for enjoyment, because I love to do it. That's why I so gladly avail myself of offers to ride the ponies that come my way.

Children Not Skilled Yet.

"Now my husband," she smiled, "while he loves horses, too, doesn't care much about riding one that doesn't belong to him." As she talked, three little girls, in stair-step size, alternated in peeping, shyly smiling, through the doorway of an adjoining room. Do they share their parents' love of horses?

They do, but not as yet their skill on horseback.

"My personal belief about children learning to ride inclines to the British, rather than to the American idea," Mrs. Dean explained. "Here children are put on horseback almost out of the cradle. And while they seem to do very well, still I think it's not altogether necessary. In England youngsters achieve an equal skill by beginning their equestrian education at the ages of 12 or 14 years. Their leg grip is better developed by that time. Too young a child is apt to develop heavy hands and arrive rather slowly at the sympathy essential between rider and mount.

"You know," she branched off, "a peculiarly close relationship springs up between horse and rider. An intuitive understanding and sympathy. There is a potential affinity between some horses and some people that can not be denied—just as in human relationship. We call it 'suitability.'

"Every horseman or horsewoman knows that between a skilled mount who doesn't intuitively react in temperament to his rider, and a green horse that, nevertheless, reflects a certain sympathetic compatability, it is wisest to choose the latter.

The Horse for You.

"That's particularly true in polo. Suppose two horses are brought out. You mount one; he's a fine, high-spirited, well-trained animal. But somehow you don't like his traits; you feel no particular fondness for him. You get on the second horse. Instantly you feel fine; you sit well; you understand each other. He may not be the better pony of the two by standard measurements, but he's the best bet for you in a game."

If horses are like children, it follows the rider must fulfill the role of mentor and friend, according to Mrs. Dean. The rider's expertness, experience and understanding are largely responsible for good performance on the part of his mount. Nervous, high strung, intelligent horses must be handled with gentleness, tact and mental persuasion; and poky dullards with aggressive urging.

"When a smart horse fails to perform in the required manner, there's usually a good and not a vicious reason," Mrs. Dean said. "Some rider who didn't understand may have punished him for something he didn't do because he didn't know how to do it, or didn't know it was the thing expected. Sometimes it's because he's been frightened.

"But he can be brought around with right handling. Talk to him; urge him up to the achievement—with a flow of words sympathetically pitched. When he comes through, praise him; pat him on the neck.

"Spurs have their use, of course," she added, "but not for venting the rider's temper. And it's never good principle to strike a horse more than twice for any offense, and then immediately. Don't wait, or he won't connect the punishment with the offense."

Elderly Ponies.

Given the polo temperament, suitability and handiness, life for a polo pony may begin as late as 14 or 16 years of age, according to Mrs. Dean, who cited instances of horses trained for the game at that late age, who later changed hands at prohibitive prices.

Temperament she classifies more or less under the head of intelligence; suitability as emotional response, and handiness as physical adaptability to the requirements of the game—starting suddenly, turning sharply, galloping smoothly.

She recalled the case of "Buster."

"Buster" was a cow pony who knew life as a business of loping the Western plains under the weight of a cowpuncher on a 50-pound saddle, cutting cattle out from the herd. Mrs. Dean rode "Buster" while living at Helena, Mont., where her husband was stationed for a time. She took a fancy to him, bought him, and trained him in polo technique. He was then 6 years old.

"I put an English flat saddle on him, a double bridle and a martingale. He was a born polo pony and soon we were having the time of our lives. But when we moved from Montana, I had to let him go. Who got him? A cowpuncher, of course. I suppose he's back under his 50-pound saddle again."

Although she has trained polo ponies all over the United States, Mrs. Dean has yet to play in a game. Her only experience has been in practice scrimmage, dating back to her first fascinated acquaintance with polo ponies. That was in 1920, when she visited her brother, regimental surgeon with the Sixth Field Artillery just returned from overseas, at Fort Des Moines, Iowa. But she admits she learned how to hit the ball without hitting the horse.

A Trainer and a Favorite Arabian

Two Tones Aid Facial Beauty

Make-Up Expert Tells of Shadings to Obscure Some Defects.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10 (AP).—Women this fall, if they follow the advice of Paul Rilling, of Chicago, former European make-up expert, will require at least two shades of powder and not infrequently two shades of eye shadow.

Rilling's theory of make-up, as expounded to the Illinois Hair Dressers' Association, is based on harmonizing lights and shadows, and by creating illusions to change, if needed, the contour of the face.

To tone down a double chin he advocated putting it in the shade by using a darker face powder than that applied to the forehead.

Two Types of Faces.

Likewise if the feminine nose is too prominent it can be subdued by a deeper shade of powder than that used on the cheeks.

Dividing feminine faces into two classes, the long, narrow countenance and the wide, full one, he recommended that in the latter case rouge be applied on the center of the cheek and shaded toward the ear. The sides of the face should be powdered with a darker shade than the forehead and nose.

In the instance of the long, narrow face he shades the rouge from the center of the cheek toward the nose and powders the face from the forehead to the chin with darker powder than is used near the ears.

How to Mark Lips.

A cupid's bow mouth is for the girl with a round, full face, while her long-faced sister draws lips that are longer and straighter. The eyebrows of the latter tend to be straight while the woman with the wider face should go in for rounded, arched brows.

In eye shadow he recommended slate gray for daytime wear, and where the eye is naturally shadowed he advised blending the gray, applied on the outer edge of the upper lid, with brown worked in toward the brow.

He described this combination as especially effective for brown eyes or for deeply tanned skin.

Japan to See Stella Walsh

Track Star May Recoup Power That Drooped in Olympics.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

IF JAPANESE girls can ever be said to be agog, they are now. Stella Walsh, feminine speed demon, says she is going to Japan to compete in track and field. She leaves early this month. The rise of women's athletics in Japan is still so comparatively new that her selection of that country is a significant compliment.

Japan's showing at the recent women's world games in London was not impressive, but in illustration of the attitude of respect accorded Japanese girls' athletics, the Japanese team was invited to stop off in Germany on its way home, and compete in the first track and field meet in history between those two countries.

Japan Rising Athletic Power.

The total score was 61 to 25 for Germany, with the winning country holding all of the first and most of the second places. It showed that Japan has not yet developed another Hitomi, former girl Olympic star in track and field. But it also showed Japan's general rising power in women's athletics.

Stella Walsh has not been showing up in the first ranks as brightly as formerly. She was unbeatable in the past. Her records have been surpassed several times by German girls, and she herself was beaten twice at the world games.

Planning a Comeback.

She may think it is time for a comeback, and she may be planning to start that on her present tour of competition. Or again, she may think Japan a convenient place to try herself out, and do a bit of polishing up, before the Olympics loom upon her.

A question-mark about Stella Walsh is what country she will represent in the next Olympic games. Last time the bidding was between the United States and Poland. Last time, Poland won.

Paris Blends Three Colors In Ensemble

Marcel Rochas Presents Daring Innovations for Autumn.

Recent Hollywood Guest; Harmonizes Coats and Suits.

Tossing the old-time vogue for two hues to the winds, the designer, who recently visited Hollywood, displayed outfits in such striking alliances as gray, blue and American Beauty red, red-brown, white and china blue, grey, chartreuse-green and wine-red, and gray, black and light green.

He blended them carefully with the dullest hue as the base, buckled them with fleur de lys, devil's masks and Egyptian heads of a new composition resembling plaster, and topped them with high cossack hats or bright little pillbox toques.

Coats and Capes.

A simple wool frock or blouse and skirt, sometimes as long as seven inches from the ground, was his favorite starting point. These he topped with hip-length capes or three-quarter length coats, sometimes loose and swaggering in the back, sometimes trimly belted in a manner suggesting a Russian cossack's coat.

Fur Adds Smartness.

Fur gloves and fur trims added smart touches to other costumes. A black and grey striped wool dress topped by a small cape of black Astrakhan whose tie-bow was lined in dull blue and orange worked out with black astrakhan fur gauntlets and a black felt cossack toque.

A green and terra cotta wool two-piece frock appeared with a green hip-length cape trimmed about the neck with panther and a little green pill-box toque pitched over one eye.

The plaster fastenings were chiefly used as belt buckles. A red plaster devil's mask fastened the belt of one simple black frock and a white Egyptian head closed the patent leather belt of another.

Music Practice Is Made Fun

New Methods Lure Children Into Appreciation of Music.

THE wails of mothers who can not understand why their small sons and daughters refuse to practice their music lessons still sound round bridge tables, across back yard fences, wherever mothers meet.

The time-honored method of dealing with the child who refused to practice has been to say:

"Well, Johnny, if you won't practice your music you'll just have to do without. Some day you'll regret it and wish you had taken advantage of your opportunity."

"If you feel a knowledge and appreciation of music will help your child, then your duty is not to threaten to deprive him of it, but to make the study of music so attractive that he will want it of his own accord," Miss Yancey points out.

Musical interest can be stimulated in many ways, Miss Yancey says. The child should be given the opportunity to hear good music. He should be taken to concerts and recitals. If possible, he should hear child artists.

Miss Yancey gives some definite rules that will inspire the child to practice.

First of all, the instrument should be a good one, well tuned. The teacher should be modern, using the latest methods. The book should be a new one, so the child will feel it belongs to him. It should have pretty little tunes instead of dull exercises at the beginning period. The child should

The child should not be made to practise too long at a time. Ten or 15 minutes is long enough for the beginner.

The child should have a definite time to practise each day. Early morning is best, as he is not tired out by play and other activities. His parents should encourage him and give him a little help if they are musical.

Often the child is interested in music, but not in the instrument he is studying. Often a small boy will make no progress on the piano, but will show a sudden spur of real ability and interest if he is transferred to a clarinet or trumpet. Little girls have been dismal failures at violin playing, but have made rapid progress on the piano.

If all these rules fail it may be wise to face the fact that the child has no musical ability. Let him study dramatic art or dancing instead.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: What is your opinion as to which kind of girl makes the best wife—the clinging vine type or the independent girl? Another fellow and I have been having a prolonged argument on the subject, and we have agreed to take your decision as final. He is in favor of the independent girl, while I maintain the clinging vine type, being more feminine in nature, is the best bet as a wife.

• • • •

I am never able to get along with these modern girls, who seem to think it's their business to lead men around by the nose and that the world is their oyster. I'm for the old-fashioned girl who takes it for granted that if she looks to a man for protection, he'll provide it.

A Definite Ballot.

DEAR TWENTY: If I were a man and 20, and drawing up specifications for a wife, I would wish for the good judgment to appreciate those qualities in a girl which make her independent and able to stand on her own feet. And I would wish for sufficient discernment to be able to see the girl for what she really is, and not to be taken in by the smoke screen of what she wished me to think she was.

• • • •

The real trouble with these clinging vine girls is they don't exist in actuality in the form they exist in the romantic male imagination. A man sees them as females of angelic disposition, gracious selfishness, endless appreciation of masculine superiority and a preference for sublimating their own possibilities of self expression to the more important business of furthering a man's realization of dreams and ambitions.

• • • •

Seen through a woman's eye, the clinging vine girl is a selfish, designing creature, mentally and physically lazy, with only a limited amount of character, resourcefulness and intelligence. That little intelligence she uses in grafting herself like a leach to the life of some gullible man, convincing him his mission in life is to work his fingers to the bone providing her with the things she could not, or would not obtain through her own efforts.

She is usually clever enough to play up to man's traditional conception of the utterly feminine woman as an irrational, illogical, delightfully capricious child, too sensitive, helpless and idealistic to wish or to be able to come to grips with life.

• • • •

She is the woman who insidiously poisons the mind of the poor deluded man against her deadly rival—the really feminine woman: the tender, sympathetic, understanding, unselfish, considerate woman who, because her feelings are so deep, would rather die than have them discovered.

The ironic humor of the situation is that the woman whom men see as self-sufficient, independent, hard-boiled, if you like, is most often a woman who has had to create a defense against the demands of life upon her sympathies.

• • • •

True femininity expresses itself in giving, in mothering; not in taking, nor in playing the child's unconsciously selfish role. Those very girls who offend you by seeming to try to lead you around by the nose are showing a flattering and reassuring emotional interest in you, did you but recognize the symptoms.

Since you ask me to cast my ballot for the clinging vine or independent girl, I vote in favor of the latter. But perhaps you've already guessed it. M. H.

Shoes to Appear In National Colors

Red, White and Blue Will Be Worn in Spring.

Feet will present a National color scheme next spring and summer with red shoes, blue shoes and white shoes tapping along sidewalks. Among the new shades adopted for spring footwear at a recent conference of shoe manufacturers and representatives of the Textile Color Card Association were red, described as the "red of a bright flag," and a vivid medium blue. White shoes will be in evidence as ever.

Nine new and five repeated shades for women's shoes were adopted. The new shades include praline brown, cameo, a creamy light tone, Belmont beige and deer-taupe, a light blue of beige cast.

Three pastel tones were adopted, a chamois yellow, a pale bluish tint and a light mauvish pink. The five shades to be repeated are in browns and blues.

Concentrate on Humans, Psychologists Advised

New York, Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Mice, apes and other animals occupy too much the attention of psychologists, Dr. Rensie Likert, assistant professor of psychology at New York University, declared in a plea for more study of human behavior. Dr. Likert recently spoke before a dinner meeting of the Psychological Corporation at the Faculty Club, Columbia University.

The goal of the profession should be a study of the every-day life of man, with the aim of establishing a science of human behavior, he declared.

Men Acquire Ailing Nerves From Crash

IN BOOM times women had the nervous breakdowns; men have them now, according to Dr. Beran Wolfe, of New York, psychiatrist and author of psychological studies.

Dr. Wolfe, in an interview with Dorothy Dayton in the New York Sun, points out there is a sound reason for the transference of "nerves" from one sex to the other. He says:

"For centuries society has expected success from men, material and financial success, and the youth has been brought up to believe he can follow a straight Alger-boy line to his goal, if he is thrifty, works hard and follows certain other prescribed rules. Today he sees himself completely frustrated. Even if he is able to provide for his family the average man today sees little hope of achieving the goal he has set for himself."

Women haven't helped the situation much. Dr. Wolfe indicates. They have been brought up under the same precepts of necessity for financial success, and subconsciously feel if a husband is little good in a business way he's little good at all. This attitude has persisted in spite of the decrease in nervous breakdowns among women and feminine courage in the face of the depression.

Dr. Wolfe mentions the situation of the girl and boy just out of college who want to marry but can't find work. He feels much suffering would be averted if such couples should marry regardless of lack of jobs and lack of allowances from their families. They should have the courage to face unemployment together.

As a remedy for blasted egos of husbands and wives he prescribes "joining." He says, "Let them join a welfare society, or a parent-teacher movement, or a study society, or anything that throws them with their fellows, and gives them a sense of achievement along some line."

Supplementing such active measures such men and women should avoid introspection and retrospection, says Dr. Wolfe.

Webner Appointed P.-T. A. Executive

H. J. T. Webner, former American University student, has been appointed general secretary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. He is now educational adviser at Civilian Conservation Camp M. P. 3 and 4, Wilderness, Va., and will come to Washington to assume his new duties as head of the P.-T. A. Congress headquarters office early this month. He succeeds W. Elwood Baker, who has held the position since 1930.

Mr. Webner is a graduate of Pennsylvania State College and has done graduate work at American University here and the Merrill-Palmer School, Detroit. He has had experience, both as a teacher and school administrator, in public and private schools, in rural and city school systems, in grade and high schools, in the United States, and in Puerto Rico. He was manager of a fruit plantation in Puerto Rico for two years and superintendent of the Agricultural Experiment Station, Santo Domingo, for a year. He owns and manages a farm and summer camp near Richmond, Va.

He has four children. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Webner, live at 4450 Reservoir road northwest.

PILLAR TO POST

SCHOOL teachers and pupils will benefit by the new series of motion pictures enfitled "See America First," believe Washington women who saw the preview of the film at the Mayflower recently.

• • • •

These pictures of historical scenes as they are today, entitled "Pilgrim Days," "Boston Tea Party," "Hail Columbia," and "Dixie Land," with the inspiring travelogues by E. M. Newman that accompany them, are calculated to restore dormant patriotic emotions.

• • • •

Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, long a leader in Washington residential society, is most enthusiastic over the pictures. She does not have an ancestor who did not come over before the Revolution and she says: "Pride of ancestry should entail a special responsibility, a feeling that you must work to preserve the Nation."

• • • •

Mrs. Frazer was formerly Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, a descendant of the famous family who settled upon a grant of land from the States General of Holland in New York State in 1630. She was born in the manor house, built by Killaen Van Rensselaer before 1700. Woodwork and wallpaper from this house are in the Van Rensselaer room of the Metropolitan Museum in New York. She is also a direct descendant of Peter Stuyvesant and Maj. Gen. Schuyler, whose portraits are now in her house on Sixteenth street.

• • • •

Once when the major general, who had married a Van Rensselaer and lived in Rensselaerwyk with his family, was away fighting in the Indian wars, his house was surrounded by Indians. The family escaped, forgetting to take the baby from his crib. Margaret Schuyler returned to save the baby. As she was coming down the staircase, carrying her infant brother, an Indian threw a tomahawk at her, missed, and the marks are still to be seen on the bannister. She managed to escape. As a young woman she was noted for her beauty, and was called "The Star of the North." Her picture is to be seen in the engraving, "George Washington and His Court." Talleyrand is said to have commented upon her brilliant mind and her fine grasp of world affairs. She married her cousin, another Van Rensselaer, and Mrs. Frazer is descended from this union.

• • • •

Mrs. Frazer is descended on her mother's side from Sarah Ball, the sister of George Washington's mother. And she remembers a great-aunt, still living when she was a small child, who had visited Mount Vernon and called the first President "Cousin George."

• • • •

Mrs. Frazer is widely known for her work in the restoration of Belleau Wood after the war. In 1919, in conjunction with Mrs. Marie Moore Forest, a pageant was produced at the Willard Hotel which included the scene "The Signing of the Constitution," in which 32 descendants of the original signers took part. Mrs. Frazer would like to see this scene reproduced in the movies. She thinks the idea of laying film stress on our own history is a wonderful one.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

ANNOUNCERS armed with microphones are waiting to board the hot, charred decks of the Morro Castle . . . waiting to broadcast a description of desolation, of efforts to recover bodies . . . but authorities won't let them until it's possible to walk through the ruined ship without being scorched.

And even as we write it's turning into a race between the three major broadcasting systems to be the first to air the tragedy.

There's some dispute as to who got the jump on this, the greatest news broadcast in all the history of radio. But while people were dickering and dragging equipment down to the beach opposite the foundering ship, A. B. S. let loose with its air Saturday morning at 11:15 a. m. for 40 minutes from the pier where the Monarch of Bermuda, rescue ship, docked. Yesterday A. B. S. also plugged in on investigation proceedings at the cushom house and planned to keep going as long as it kept coming in.

WOL here asked listeners if they wanted the broadcast continued . . . both phones were swamped . . . 42 calls same in and that station kept right on during its silent period from 1 to 3 p. m. during which they are ordinarily off the air.

C. B. S. has been on intermittently since Saturday morning with Paul Douglas, an intrepid announcer if there ever was one, aching to board the ship. N. B. C. aired remarks by Harris B. Hull Saturday afternoon and since has been laboring to complete setting up of equipment. It's happenings like these that keep people like Paul White, C. B. S.'s New York director of news broadcasts, stepping and on the jump. They're working like beavers right now . . . better be near your dial!

• • • •

NOW that the White brothers—three lively, likable lads—are to appear with C. B. S. on a network show, N. B. C. has decided they really are worth plotting and planning for.

There's a bare possibility that these enterprising boys may like their appearance with Freddy Martin's orchestra so well that they may decide that C. B. S. networks are not so bad after all. That's what N. B. C. was ruminating over yesterday morning.

So John, Gene and Dick, who smile and grasp your hand like it meant something when you meet them, will keep a little date with N. B. C. tomorrow. A whole auditioning period has been set aside for them and their very entertaining 15-minute collection of songs, chatter and harmony will be piped up the line to New York, where N. B. C.'s sustaining department will sit in easy chairs and decide what to do with them.

They'd better be quick about it and call in clerks to write their names down in the files—or the bold, bad boys from C. B. S. might exert a bit of pressure.

TONY WONS, who started a new dramatic series with N. B. C. on September 2 as the host of the House by the Side of the Road, is heard Sundays at 4:30 p. m. and daily at 10:15 a. m. on N. B. C. networks.

HARDIE MEAKIN, RKO-Keith's Washington manager, emerged from a preview of "The Count of Monte Cristo" just in time yesterday to confirm the announcement that local talent from Shannon Allen's "Airbreaks" will soon go on the stage of his theater for a popularity contest, with the audience voting.

They'll let Shannon pick the best from half a hundred groups and individuals that have appeared on his WRC Saturday night spot for the last three months and turn them into a real, first rate show for stage presentation. Prizes of $100 and $50 will be awarded the two acts that draw the most applause from the audience.

You listeners who have shared our enthusiasm for "Spade Flush" as well as other outstanding bits of colored talent will have an opportunity to see . . . and this is part of the fun . . . just how lively a bunch of colored youngsters are when they get bit by rhythm.

BOB TROUT, WJSV's versatile laddie with the pipe, leaves today with his wife for a two weeks' tour of the West Indies with the first stop Puerto Rico. Much energy was spent by Bob and his charming wife in selecting books to take along.

Somewhat concerned over who is likely to fill the announcing vacancy presently to be left by Don Douglas' decision to go to the Coast, we cornered Kenneth Berkely, one of WRC's hardier executives and this is what he had on his mind:

"When there's a vacancy we go to New York and look over the lists . . . but we'll listen to whatever local talent is available too . . . I haven't the slighest idea now as to who will fill the vacancy." Berkely also expressed doubt that local football games would be broadcast. There's not much use competing with National games and the charges would be too high. That's how it stands.

Let Chevrolet tell its own story of riding and driving comfort

Make the ownership test

WHEN all is said and done, the best way to get at the truth behind the fine things you hear and read about the new Chevrolet, is to get in the car and drive. Take this car (your Chevrolet dealer will gladly loan you one), drive it over the same routes, in the same way you drive your present automobile, and let the results you can see and feel tell their own story. You have heard that Knee-Action makes bad roads good, and good roads better. A ride will prove it. You have heard that Chevrolet provides shock-proof steering, Synchro-Mesh gear-shifting, a remarkably flexible 80-horsepower engine, and cable-controlled brakes. A few minutes at the wheel will show you what a difference these advancements make in safety and driving ease. And when the ride is over, and you step out refreshed and ready for more, you will know why so many thousands have found it impossible to return to ordinary driving after an experience like this. That is the Ownership Test—simple, easy, enjoyable, and the most practical way to choose a car. Your Chevrolet dealer has a car waiting so that you can make this test. How about today?

Ouimet Is Upset in U. S. Amateur; Dettweiler and McCarthy Win

Max Marston Is Beaten in Surprise

By Dave Herman
(Post Staff Correspondent).

THE COUNTRY CLUB, Brookline, Mass., Sept. 10 (Spl.).—An 18-year-old golfer, who answers to the name of Bobby Jones, but is not the great Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, injected drama, romance and glamour into the opening round of the National amateur golf championship today over Brookline's famous course by unceremoniously blasting Francis Ouimet, winner in 1913 and 1931, out of the title picture.

The new Bobby Jones is a Detroit boy, who came ot the tournament thinking he didn't even have a Chinaman's chance of getting past his inaugural match. A pale looking lad, weighing no more than 130 pounds, 5½ feet in height, he provided this all-match play championship with its first spectacular upset by defeating the great Ouimet, 1 up, in a breath-taking 18-hole struggle.

Dettweiler Is Victor.

In the longest overtime match of the opening round, Billy Dettweiler, 16-year-old Washington, D. C., star, defeated young Johnny Burke, of Middleton, R. I., 1 up, on the twenty-first hole here. Martin F. McCarthy gave the District a clean sweep for the day by soundly trouncing his opponent, Charles B. Round, of Providence, R. I., 5 and 3.

Dettweiler, youngest participant in the all-match play championship, played good and spotty golf to conquer his 17-year-old rival, who is the Rhode Island champion, and was strongly favored to win.

McCarthy, Beaver Dam's rugged entry, won as he pleased, capturing four of the first five holes, leading 3 up at the turn, and closing out the finalist in the recent New England championship on the fifteenth green with a par 4.

Two other District golfers, Gene Vinson, of Manor, and Jimmy Drain, of Washington Golf and Country Club, drew byes.

The Jones-Ouimet battle was real drama. Here was a kid playing in his first big championship and here was a 41-year-old gentleman who 21 years ago as a caddy gave America a never-to-be-forgotten golfing thrill by defeating the stalwart British stars, Harry Vardon and Ted Ray, in a play-off for the National Open Championship.

Great Jones Watches.

The Bobby Jones, retired emperor of golf, who met Ouimet four times, was in the gallery, following with interest every shot the youngster made. He walked the full 18 holes, and marveled at the kid's iceberg nerves, his resolute courage, and his mastery of wood and iron.

"The boy hits every shot, and what a putter," the peerless Atlantan remarked. "I know just how Ouimet feels. I've been in the same predicament. Remember what Johnny Goodman did to me at Pebble Beach in 1929?"

Ouimet's defeat was one of two unexpected reversals today. Almost as surprising was the 1 up trimming handed Max Marston, Philadelphia's gentleman-farmer, 1923 champion, runner-up last year, by ambitious Knox M. Young, jr., a Pittsburgh youngster who didn't have to play good golf to eliminate the 225-pound former champion on the home green. In fact, each played poorly, but Young capitalized on the breaks. Marston's infected finger ruined his driving.

Other Favorites Win.

Favorites in the other 53 matches ran true to form, and tonight the stage was set for the debut of several dozen stars who enjoyed first round "breathers."

Ouimet and Marston were the only former champions to lose. Chick Evans, 1916-1920 title holder, playing in his twenty-fifth championship, had to rally after being 2 down to put out 18-year-old Crawford Rainwater, of Atlanta, 2 up. Rainwater's daddy, pioneer of Dixie golf, sent him up to Brookline to renew a family acquaintance, and the luck of the draw brought them together on the course. Such is golf.

Bull-necked Jess Guilford, the Boston fusileer, champion in 1921, had easy pickings, eliminating the Canadian star, Gordon B. Taylor, 5 and 4, and 50-year-old H. Chandler Egan, 1904-05 champion, rolled to a leisurely 3 and 1 victory over J. Wolcott Brown, of Breille, N. J.; S. Davidson Herron, of Oakmont, fat and fussy, who defeated Bobby Jones for the 1919 championship, went out in 45, and protected a 1 up lead amassed at the turn to eliminate Hal Chase, of Des Moines, 2 and 1.

Somerville Triumphs.

Averting defeat with a superb exhibition of iron play and putting, Ross (Sandy) Somerville, iron-nerved Canadian, who defeated

Harper, Howell and Riegel Virginia Title Golf Victors

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 10 (AP).—Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Virginia State Amateur champion, Bobby Riegel and Billy Howell, both of Richmond, carried the Old Dominion's colors into the second round of the National Amateur Golf championship by winning their respective first-round engagements here today.

Howell and Harper both came from behind on the last 9 holes to pull their matches out of the fire, the latter going 19 holes to nose out Dom Socolli, of Hartford, Conn., former New England Public Links champion, 1 up. Howell, semifinalist in the 1931 championship at Chicago, had to finish well to beat Harry Eichelberger, from Los Angeles, 2 up.

Riegel Handy Winner.

Riegel found his way to the second round much easier, advancing at the expense of Ed Busiere of nearby Brockton, Mass., by the margin of 5 and 3. Riegel, current holder of the Middle Atlantic crown, recovered from a sloppy start to take the sixth, seventh and eighth holes in order and was out in front thereafter.

While Harper, Howell, and Riegel remained in the running to join James G. Drain and Charles W. Kent, two more Virginians, in the second round, the latter pair having drawn first round byes, James Watts, of Lynchburg, and J. Davis Ewell, jr., of Richmond, fell by the wayside today.

Watts, an early starter, lost to W. F. Marks, of Oakmont, Pittsburgh a former Princeton golfer, 3 and 1. Ewell yielded to John Hines, of Great River, N. Y., brother of Jimmy Hines, the professional, 2 and 1.

Medal Scores Not Brilliant.

None of the Virginians did much in the way of good scoring, but Harper and Howell both finished well. Harper was 1 down leaving the ninth and 3 down going to the fourteenth, but then he started his rally, which enabled him to draw even with Socolli when the latter 3-putted the home green.

At the first extra hole, Harper pulled his approach to the right of the green, while Socolli was short with his second. The Connecticut campaigner chipped short and took two putts from 10 feet, while Harper played a fine shot out of the rough and sank a 4-footer for his winning four.

Howell and Riegel both required 42 strokes for the outward nine. Billy started home with a birdie 3 at the tenth, and went ahead, taking the fourteenth when Eichelberger was guilty of three putts for the third time on the incoming nine. Out in front at last, Billy halved the next three holes to keep his slim lead, and then made his

Dean Gains 25th As Phils Bow, 4-1

Philadelphia, Sept. 10 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals successfully continued their efforts to catch up to the league-leading New York Giants, defeating the Phillies, 4 to 1, today behind the five-hit pitching of Jerome "Dizzy" Dean.

The older of the Texas brothers advanced his string of mound victories to 25 this season. He fanned seven batters.

Jack Rothrock, Cardinal outfielder, provided the batting punch with two singles and a double in four times to bat.

The Cardinals tagged Phil Collins for two runs in the third and two more in the eighth.

Giants' Errors Let Pirates Win, 9-7

Make Six, Three in Ninth to Lose Early Lead; Ott Tops in Home Runs.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (AP).—The New York Giants' defense crumbled today as the Pittsburgh Pirates rallied in the ninth to score five runs to defeat the world champions, 9 to 7, for their seventh straight triumph. The defeat, the Giants' third successive setback, reduced the champions lead over the Cardinals to four games.

The Giants were charged with six errors, three of them in the ninth when the Pirates coupled timely hits with the mistakes to chalk up the victory. They drove Hal Schumacher, seeking his twenty-second triumph, from the mound a... continued their hitting off Carl Hubbell. Schumacher was charged with the defeat, his seventh of the season.

Three Homers in Game.

Home runs by Gus Mancuso, Hughie Critz and Mel Ott helped to pile up a commanding lead for the Giants, but it was undermined by their ragged fielding, in which every member of the starting lineup with the exception of Joe Moore, Manager Bill Terry and Ott had a part. Ott's homer was his thirty-third and gave him the National League lead.

Greenberg's Two Homers Beat Sox

Boston Defeated, 2-1, on First Sacker's Long Smashes.

Auker Allows Boston 3 Hits and Defeats Rhodes in Duel.

DETROIT, Sept. 10 (AP).—Hitting out two home runs, one in the seventh to tie the score and the other in the ninth, the bat of Hank Greenberg brought the Detroit Tigers a 2-to-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox today. The triumph boosted the Tigers' margin to 4½ games over the Yankees, who were rained out at St. Louis.

Elden Auker, freshman right-hander who hurled part of the first game of Saturday's twin bill, was in as fine a form with his throwing arm as Greenberg was with his bat. He allowed only three hits and only six balls altogether were hit out of the infield. Almada, the Spaniard recently brought back to Boston from Kansas City, connected with two of the safe blows.

Rhodes Is Effective.

Gordon Rhodes would have been almost as effective but for the presence of Greenberg. He held Detroit to five hits, two of which were made by the giant Jewish first baseman and two by Manager Mickey Cochrane.

The count was two and two on Greenberg when he leaned on the ball in the seventh inning. It sailed high over the score board in left field to tie the score. In the ninth, Hank, the first man at bat, laid on the first pitched ball and the game was over. The two circuit drives boosted his total for the year to 23.

The only Boston run came in the first inning when Bishop walked, took second on an infield out and scored as Almada connected with his first hit.

Covelli Fights Guzman at Hunt Club

Bout Features Good Card Tonight; Means Much to Both Ringmen.

FIGHTING for a match with Petey Hayes and an accompanying rise in the fistic firmament, Frankie (Kid) Covelli, the Brooklyn Wildman, pits his rat-a-tat-tat style of boxing against the deadly two-fisted punching of Baby Joe Guzman tonight in the 10-round feature bout of the Riding and Hunt Club's 36-round card. On paper, Covelli figures to be a slight favorite, but in the ring it is a horse of decidedly different hue.

Covelli won a wide following among Washington fight fans by his slashing victory over Petey Sarron and other 126-pounders. A willinf mixer, his aggressive style brought universal approval from the fans in his previous appearances here. He is a smart ringman, possessing an old head on a young body, which, backed up by a stiff jab, makes him difficult to stop.

17 in Row for Guzman.

But Guzman is a fighter in his own right, as that 17-bount winning streak will attest. He hits hard with either hand and is rugged enough to take a bit of punishment while getting in a few licks on his own account. Baby Joe, too, has visions of greener pastures and if he hurdles Covelli it will be a long step upward.

One change in the card was made last night when Al Parks injured a hand in his final day of training and was forced to withdraw. His Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 10 (AP).—President John D. Martin, of the Southern Association, said here today that attendance in the association up to and including September 1 showed a 22 per cent increase over the 1933 figures, with Atlanta leading the upswing with a 150 per cent increase.

Only Birmingham and Memphis are estimated at below their 1933 attendance figures. The present trend indicates a season attendance total for the association of 800,000, representing a 150,000 increase.

Clout Breaks 3-to-3 Tie In Duel

Stone Slams Double to Drive In Two, Knot Count in 6th.

Simmons Also Hits One for Circuit; Manush Gets 3 Singles.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 10 (Spl.).—The sadly crippled Washington Nationals, who have been floundering about the low seas of sixth place in the American League's vital statistics for lo, these many moons, sailed full-speed ahead this afternoon on the wings of Cliff Bolton's home run and beached the Chicago White Sox, 7 to 4.

"Little Cliffie's" clout, which found a resting place in the far reaches of the right field stands, unloaded the loaded bases and untied a tied 3-3 score. It came in the seventh inning, with Manush, Schulte and Sewell occupying the bases.

By their victory the Nats elevated themselves back into a fifth-place deadlock with the St. Louis Browns, who today were being rained out of their test with the Yankees.

See-Saw Struggle.

The game, up until Mr. Bolton's blast, had been a wishy-washy affair insofar as run-scoring was concerned. Chicago was off to a one-run lead in the first inning, Washington came back to tie it up in the second, Chicago took the lead again in the fifth with a pair of runs, and Washington again tied it up with two markers in the sixth. That was the way of it.

Bolton's home-run feat with three men on far overshadowed any other Washington bit, but there were two other men who had a large share in the proceedings—Johnny Stone and Jack Russell. It was Stone's double in the sixth with two on that gave the Nats their late tie.

Manush Slams Single.

In the fatal seventh, which Bolton broke up so nicely, Manush started off the proceedings by singling off Appling's glove. Schulte then singled to center and Susko sacrificed. Up came Luke Sewell and he was purposely passed to clear the decks for Johnny Kerr. But Kerr never saw the light of the inning. Instead, Bolton went in, and the rest is history.

Porter Rides Gold Signet, Favorite, to Length Triumph in Rockingham Feature

3-Year-Old Victor Over Wacoche

Runs Mile in 1:37 4-5, Pays $5.80 Mutuel; Elf Lock Third.

SALEM, N. H., Sept. 10 (AP). — Gold Signet, a 3-year-old from C. B. Schaefer's Cold Stream Stud, and away from the winners' circle since early in the year, today outfooted four other milers in the top event at Rockingham Park.

With Earl Porter in the saddle, Gold Signet jumped into an early lead and then was given a breathing spell nearing the half-mile post, dropping back to second place behind Ed Trotter's Kestin. The Cold Stream colt regained command rounding the far turn, however, and then set the pace for the remainder of the mile.

Length in Front.

At the finish, Gold Signet was a length in front of Wacoche from the Corsicana Stable, with C. V. Whitney's Elf Lock another one-half length to the rear. Kestin finished fourth, followed by The Potter.

Despite his inconsistent record, Gold Signet went to the post the choice, paying $5.80 straight. He ran the mile in the fast time of 1:37 4-5

Hastinola Surprises.

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Hastinola, from the Dixiana Stable, raced to a surprise victory today in the Momence Purse, best of the day's program at Lincoln Fields.

The veteran rider, Claude Hooper, piloted the Dixiana representative home a length in front of the choice, Thomas Platt's Star Banner. Mrs. R. Sullivan's My Blonde landed third in the 5½-furlong dash.

Hastinola, given little heed in the wagering, paid $21.96 to win and ran the distance in 1:07 3-5.

Slapdash Is Winner.

Belmont Park Race Track, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Wheatley Stable's filly, Slapdash, which was beaten off in her start at Rockingham, ran a sensational mile in 1:36 2-5 here today to win the Pontiac, an overnight handicap. Carrying 111 pounds, the Stimulus miss won by four lengths and paid 7 to 1.

Reds Down Dodgers, 6-5; Rain Mars Game

The latter moved up gradually when straightened out on the back stretch and closed willingly in the stretch run. G. P. O. Nine, Although Outhit, Trims Kann's, 11-8, in Post Week-Day Series

1,500 Watch Lyons Best Rivals

Errors Aid in Triumph; Brewers Will Make Debut Today.

ALTHOUGH outhit, 16 hits to 13, Government Printing Office, champions of the Departmental League, defeated Kann's, Department Store winner, by the score of 11-to-8 in yesterday's battle in The Post Association interleague week-day championship series. A crowd of 1,500 witnessed the contest.

Heurich Brewers, the Industrial League representative, make their debut in the titular series today against Acacia, of the Capital City League. Acacia defeated Grace A. C., Georgetown Church League champs, in the opening game. Artie Scrivner and Joe Sullivan are expected to hook up in a southpaw pitching duel. The game starts at 4 o'clock.

Lyons Tight in Pinch.

The Kann's batters took many liberties with the offerings of Bob Lyons yesterday, but the G. P. O. left-hander was generally able to bear down and avert any run scoring. Only in the eighth—the final inning—was Lyons in any serious trouble. The Kann's murderers' row of Mills, Nolan, Bassin and McVean whacked out hits in quick succession to score four tallies, but Lyons regained his composure in time to fan Cuozzo and Wallach for the final outs.

Opportune hits by Ray Homan, Wilner and Sole enabled the Printing Office nine to amass an early lead in the opening innings. Catcher Sole produced other timely blows in the fifth and sixth innings to boost the total. The Kann's team itself threw in the final tally with some plain and fancy bobbles and booting.

Bob McVean Stars.

Bob McVean, with four bingles in five trips to the plate, was the day's batting hero. Joe Mills' smashing home run clout in the eighth also enlivened the activities.

Golf Title Is Won By Chestertown

Chester River Team Scores by Large Margin.

Chestertown, Md., Sept. 10 (Spl.). For the second consecutive year golfers of the Chester River Country Club, of Chestertown, Md., annexed the team championship of the Eastern Shore Golf League when they defeated the Green Hill Country Club, of Salisbury, 15½ to 8½, on the neutral course of the Mapledale Country Club here.

Last year the Kent County Club swingers defeated Cape Charles, Va., on the Salisbury course in the play-off finals. This year Salisbury has won the Southern tier title of the Shore loop while Chestertown has lifted the championship of the northern counties.

A large gallery of Salisbury, Chestertown and Dover enthusiasts followed the play as Chester River players found little difficulty with the Wicomico County outfit.

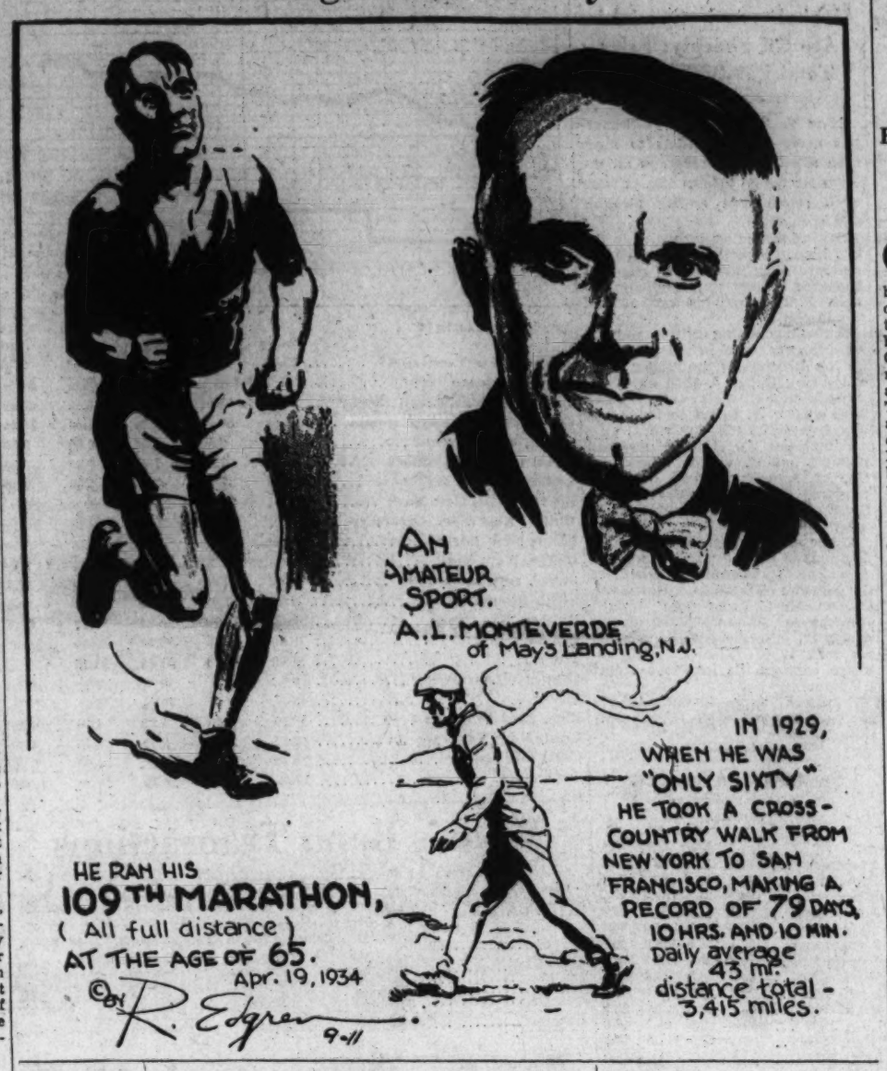
Through Edgren's Eyes



Hook, Line and Sinker

By Jean Monk.

LAST Tuesday four Department of Agriculture chemists, Messrs. G. L. Bidwell, J. J. T. Graham, R. A. Osborn and H. J. Wickham, went to Piney Point (Tall Timbers), and Capt. Goldsborough took them to the big rockfish.

In a little over two hours they had 16 of the striped monsters tucked away in their box. They were 4 to 10 pounders.

Still-fishing for croakers has just about come to the end of a glorious season. Only a few extra large ones are being caught here and there. Trout is the big word now, but trolling for bluefish is the new crossword puzzle.

Those super-enthusiasts who made such a fuss about trolling back in June, July and August, when there was little or no trolling, seem hard-pressed for the right word at the present moment, now that the sport is here.

Ideal Equipment.

We are told, for instance, that a fly-rod equipped with a light line and a bass plug is the ideal trolling equipment. A high official in a local angling league is quoted as authority. All of which throws considerable light on why there are fish tales.

Experienced salt-water fishermen know that trolling under ideal conditions is done with a stiff rod, a spoon of reasonable size, a 2 to 4 ounce sinker and with 75 to 90 feet of line. With such an equipment one gets the maximum of thrill out of the sport. But——

And that's the point. Just now—mind you, just now—such an equipment is not effective in the majority of instances. A little later it may be effective. Just now there are millions of shiners, silversides, smelts in the waters. Bluefish are feeding on these small fish and they are constantly refusing the larger trolling spoons. Bluefish are not feeding on alewives.

Lands 22 Blues.

The other day Capt. R. E. Lee, Shady Side, Md., did a bit of chumming in 22 feet of water not far out, in the mouth of West River, to be exact. He landed 22 blues, some of them 5 pounders. He trolled later and landed 5 more.

Capt. Johnny Manifold, Herring Bay, Md., trolled close inshore and returned with 36 trout, 1 to 6 pounds each. Capt. Bernard Marshall and Capt. Ed Crandell landed 56 trout on two trips out, 1 to 3 pounds each. They were all trolling and they used small spoons.

Capt. Harry Manifold, Herring Bay, trolled a party of four men; two of them used No. 3 spoons, the other two used No. 1 and No. 0 spoons, and the small spoons landed 34 of the 36 fish caught.

8-Ounce Sinker.

An 8-ounce sinker is sufficient in shallow water. Let out just enough line to touch bottom now and then. When the fish are breaking draw in the line until not more than 25 feet is out.

Trollers who drive long distances for bluefish are always in a frame of mind to bring home the bacon, regardless of method. If the blues will not take the large spoons, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, change to the smaller ones, Nos. ½, 0 and 00. If they will not take the single spoon, use the spreader with a heavy sinker.

L. D. Huntington, originator of the drone, uses two spreaders on his trolling boats, one on each side. He uses a reel and rod also. Capt. Tom Trott, of Palmers, Md., uses spreaders on his boat, plus a rod and reel. Capt. Harry Woodburn, Solomons, Md., uses only a handline equipped with a spreader. Trolling boats fishing out of St. Jeromes Creek are equipped with spreaders.

Work Just as Well.

The spreader brings home the bacon. Capt. Harry Woodburn uses only 8 ounces of lead at all times—never changes. He lets out more line when the fish go down and only about 25 to 30 feet when they are breaking. His spreader leaders are only about 8 inches long. He says they work just as well. He uses No. 2 spoons and he is a Pflueger enthusiast.

He made a catch of 24 bluefish on one trip, using the handline exclusively, a Huntington drone on one leader, a similar-size Pflueger drone on the other leader, and the Pflueger landed 22 of the 24 fish.

When a troller goes after blues he goes after sport plus meat. If the regular trolling equipment will not deliver this meat and the spreader will, the intelligent troller will resort to the spreader, if possible. It is common sense.

A few days later, when the minnows are thinned out and it can't be long now), and the fish begin taking the spoons in the old-fashioned way, there will still be plenty of time to use the regular equipment.

North Virginia League In Meeting Tomorrow

President Bragg has called a meeting of the Northern Virginia League teams for tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at The Post Sports Department. Franchise fees will be returned to the teams and final plans for the championship series between Middleburg and Manassas will be outlined. Secretary Buchanan requests all teams to have representatives present.

The interest of the fans in the Northern Virginia loop and the cooperation of the team managers and league officers with The Post Association has proved a boon to sandlot baseball in the nearby Virginia communities.

Sun Slows Up Dixie Grid Drills

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—The water bucket was the most popular spot on Lambeth Field today as the University of Virginia football squad ran through a practice session under a blazing-hot, summerlike sun. Coach Gus Tebell and his assistants spent much of both the morning and afternoon sessions in blocking drill. They sought to correct faults that appeared in the Friday and Saturday scrimmages. Mus Male and Harry Tolin, regular freshman backs last year, joined the squad today.

William and Mary.

Williamsburg, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—The second week of fall training began here this morning with a warm sun shining down on William and Mary's football squad as the boys worked out on Cary Field. It was the second time since practice opened on Labor Day that the squad has had a dry field.

Normal Murray, of Garden City, N. Y., and Junie Smith, of Richmond, reported for duty today. Murray, who played at the end position last year, is a letterman. He will probably serve as a tackle this year, Smith, also a letterman, will again have a back-field assignment.

The squad was drilled on punting, passing and play running in today's sessions. Coaches are taking things a little easy and letting the squad slip into smoothness gradually. Night practice sessions are slated for later in the month.

Virginia Military.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Virginia Military Institute cadets started their second week of practice today with a squad increased to 48. Felton Riley, 190-pound guard, was among the new arrivals, bringing the total number of letter men to 11.

Showing no ill effects from the grinding two hours of scrimmage they went through Saturday, the cadets went through a long practice session today with stress being laid on passing—Wayt Clark and Selden McMillin did most of the heaving.

Coaches Raftery and Hess expressed satisfaction over the fact that Capt. Jack Zimmerman's old injury has not bothered his work in the scrimmages so far this season. Zimmerman, with Sam Lowe, 190-pound guard, showed well in the melees.

Hampden-Sydney.

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—The Hampden-Sydney squad, boosted by the arrival of Clarence Campbell, half back, went through a stiff practice session here today. Harshbarger, a star lineman, and Johnny Williams, fullback, are expected to join the squad tomorrow. The squad, numbering approximately 30 players, is doing two practice sessions daily.

Post No. 11 Carriers Take Zone One Title

Behind the one-hit pitching of Smith and Morel, the baseball team representing the Post Substation No. 11 carrier salesmen yesterday clouted out an 11-to-3 victory over District 10 to win the championship of Post circulation Zone One. The game was played at Chevy Chase playground.

The winners pounded Rentress and A. Murray, No. 10's hurlers, for 9 hits, staging a 7-run rally in the seventh to clinch the victory.

Red Grange Day Oct. 13 Listed by Illini Eleven

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 10 (AP).—The University of Illinois will pay formal tribute to Harold (Red) GGrange, at its home-coming game October 13, when the Illini meet Ohio State in Memorial Stadium.

The old "Galloping Ghost," Illinois' greatest gridiron warrior, now a member of the National professional champion Chicago Bears, will be the guest of honor at a special celebration planned to commemorate the days when he helped pack Memorial Stadium.

"The Athletic Association of the university is happy to honor Red Grange at home-coming," Athletic Director George Huff said today. "It is appropriate at this time, almost ten years since he left the university, that we do what we can to remind him that his football deeds have not been forgotten. By this, we are helping to kepe alive the Grange tradition."

Football in Virginia . . .

Virginia Bureau of The Post.
Richmond, Sept. 10.

PERHAPS there will be only two college football games in America next Saturday—and both of these will be in Virginia. Roanoke College will meet Elon, of North Carolina, under the floodlights at Salem, and Emory and Henry will play Guilford, another Tarheel outfit, under the arcs at Emory.

If any other college teams are scheduled to clash prior to Friday, September 21, the composite schedules fail to show it. The fans of southwest Virginia are taking noticeable pride in the fact that they will see the big fall parade start. Those most zealous of the southwest's name and fame think that Southwestern Virginia, Inc., the regional chamber of commerce, should take a tip from the Californians and make a grand howde-do over the new eminence.

Promising Sophomores.

If coaches whose teams meet William and Mary in football this fall will take the trouble to find out what some of these Indian gridmen did in track they will learn a lot that won't help their peace of mind. The mentors are advised particularly to check up on two sophomore wingmen—Walter Zable, Roxbury, Mass., and Al Degutis, formerly of South Boston, Mass., now of Reedsville, Va.

Zable won four first places in every meet the Indian freshmen staged last spring. His specialty is the 220-yard dash, which he ran in 21.5 seconds. It will be another case of "Katie, bar the door," when this big boy snags a pass and a lightning fast tackler isn't right on him. Nor is that all the rival secondary has to worry about. Young Degutis copped five first places in every meet and is reported to snag passes accordingly—five chances that he will get away to four that he won't. Both lads are 6-footers and weight about 170.

Have Small Squad.

Coaches Tommy Dowler and "Smilin' John" Kellison have a small squad—only 27 men to date. Yet one may be quite sure that the Indians of 1934 have more quality, even if less quantity, than recent tricolor squads. Close observers at Williamsburg are unable so far to shed even one sympathetic tear when Graduate Manager Billy Gooch mournfully intones his lament that "it looks like a mighty hard year for the Him and Her boys. We lost 14 lettermen, and the frosh didn't lick anybody much."

The fact is that William and Mary is sitting pretty in the line, with possible exception of one tackle. The tricolor is stronger than usual at center, guard and end.

Tommy Dowler's backfield problems are real, indeed. The loss of Dale Worrell, Billy Palese and Dave Young shattered a very capable quartet. Even at that, Dowler has four lettermen returning. Even the back field bids fair to be a pleasant surprise to Billy Gooch, even if it can't be classed as the very best in the State.

Fear Big Passer.

There is nothing in the papers about it, but the gang at athletic headquarters at Roanoke College is secretly wondering if Elon still has that big, raw-boned, left-handed passer. They haven't been able to find out, since his name, for some reason, was lost in the shuffle, but Coach Gordon (Pap) White and Athletic Director Frank Kosky remember mighty well how that boy could race to right and whip 'em back to the left—something that few port-siders can do with any accuracy.

Buried in the football news from V. M. I. last week was the simple statement that Russ Coleman, 195-pound tackle, was excused from practice during the week, due to a recent illness. Think not that Russ Coleman can merely sit around all day and let Mother Nature slowly cure his ills. He's the object of as much attention as a millionaire's kid at summer camp.

Counted on Heavily.

And so would he be on any other Virginia campus where the coach was centering as much hopes in him as Bill Raftery does. That boy is slated to carry a lot of the dynamite in the Keydet line. If Russ Coleman's temperature varies an iota, the medicos go into a huddle. The best tonics and lots of spinach doubtless are on his menu.

The Virginia Tech coaches are going in strong for graduate students on their squad this fall. Four of the boys slated to be in every game for Tech got their diplomas last June and are working toward graduate degrees. They are Martin Cunningham, half back; Norman Ochs, guard; Red English, guard, and Dave Thomas, end. Thomas reported today, one week late, after being given up for lost, so Monk Younger, who handles the ends, is smiling again.

Post Nine Bows To Police in Alexandria

Errors Loom Large in Cops' 7-2 Victory in First of League Title Series.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 10 (Spl.).—The Police nine today got the jump in the play-off for the Commercial League championship, taking the first game from The Post Team, 7 to 2. Hicks, the Coppers' pitcher had one bad inning, the first, in which The Post nine scored two runs. In the inning the Police hitters, with the aid of errors by Hamilton, pushed over three markers and from this point were never headed.

McMenniman and Hicks each granted seven hits. However, the Coppers received numerous opportunities and took advantage of some erratic play in the sixth to tally four runs and cinch the game.

Trio Leads Police Attack.

Hicks, Colonsanto and Watkins led the Coppers with stick with two safeties each. The last-named pair was credited with the only extra base hits, both hitting doubles.

The next game is set for Wednesday at 4:30 o'clock.

Borries, Clark Star in Navy Practice

Hard Scrimmage Is Held; Four Elevens Used by Hamilton.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 10 (AP). Using four teams during the practice period, Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton, head coach of the Naval Academy football squad, today sent his players through a hard scrimmage.

A team composed of veterans and first-string men from last season worked on the offensive against a "B" squad eleven. The tentative varsity executed the new shift smoothly and ran off power plays, end runs and forward passes, gaining ground with little difficulty against the opposition.

Buzz Borries Gains.

Fred (Buzz) Borries, jr., and William C. (Bill) Clark worked in the back field with Richard R. Pratt and Thomas S. King, jr. Borries, running from the No. 4 position where he could get a good start, smashed through the line and circled end for good gains. Clark also demonstrated line-smashing ability. The line functioned smoothly, taking their men out well on most of the plays.

With a group of strong guard material on hand, it appears that David Zabriskie, jr., left guard of the varsity last season, and Capt. Richard H. Burns, varsity right guard, will have to battle to retain their positions. The fight for these two posts promises to be the hardest in the Navy line-up.

Week-Day Series Schedule Revised

The week's schedule for The Post Association interleague week-day series has been revised, bringing changes in games scheduled the latter part of the week.

Today's game between Heurich's and Acacia is unchanged. College Park, Maryland Suburban title winners, meets Government Printing Office on Wednesday, and the Grace A. C.-Federal gome has been shifted back to Thursday. On Friday Kann's meets the loser of today's Heurich-Acacia contest.

Stocks Yield Ground Under Selling Drive

Inflation Hopes Weaken; Trading Volume Rises to 696,000 Shares.

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—Stocks yielded ground under renewed selling today, despite signs of seasonal expansion in business activity and a favorable impression in bond circles of the Treasury's week-end financing announcement.

United States Smelting & Refining, following its wide decline last week, broke about 11 points and finished 8¾ points lower, at 113. At its low for the day, 111½, it was nearly 30 points under last week's best price. American Smelting, Alaska Juneau, McIntyre Porcupine, Cerro de Pasco and Howe Sound dropped fractions to nearly 2 points.

Illusions of Inflation.

From the action of metals, coupled with strength in the dollar in foreign exchange trading and other developments, market observers inferred that speculators were giving up some of their recent inflation illusions.

In connection with the Government's financing announcement, there was widespread discussion in financial quarters of a shift toward more conservative policies in the Administration and its efforts to reassure capital.

The share market drifted most of the day while Wall Street waited for results of the Maine election and a rift in the textile strike clouds. A burst of selling in the last hour carried prices downward to a new low on the decline from the August 25 rally tops.

Market Dips 1.5 Points.

Trading expanded appreciably on the late decline. The turnover was 696,000 shares, against 688,570 Friday.

American Can, Santa Fe, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse and American Telephone were among outstanding issues finishing a point or more lower. California Packing lost 3¼ points; Atlas Powder, 3; Air Reduction, 2; Dupont, 2½; Pennsylvania Railroad, 2, and Reading Railroad, on a transfer of 100 shares, 5¾ points.

Action of leading commodities bolstered the impression gathered from the movement of stock that inflation ideas had undergone revision in speculative camps.

Small Steel Pick-up.

Steel reports confirmed recent indications in railroad freight movements of a small seasonal pick-up. The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated production of the industry this week at 20.9 per cent of capacity, an increase of 2½ points over a week ago. A month ago operations were estimated at 22.3 per cent of capacity.

The first railroads to report last week's carloadings experienced the usual Labor Day decline in traffic. However, loadings of Western carriers continued to run well ahead of last year.

With no textile strike agreement in sight, the dividend meeting of American Woolen attracted attention. Directors did not declare a dividend on the preferred. Three months ago $1.25 was paid. The stock sold off more than a point.

Wool Market.

Boston, Sept. 10 (AP). (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—The Boston Wool Market was practically at a standstill. The closing of many wool manufacturing plants on account of the textile strike has further reduced raw wool requirements which had been very small for many weeks previous to the strike. While there was no current trading upon which to base market quotations, holders of strictly combing wool were maintaining a waiting attitude and were not making changes in asking prices.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during week ending September 8, amounted to 536,800 pounds, compared with 10,657,400 during the previous week.

Bank Deposits in United States Rise to $46,037,735,000 Total

New York, Sept. 10.—Based on figures for commercial banks released by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and by the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, the American Banker states that bank deposits in the United States on July 1 totaled $46,037,735,000, in 15,597 banks, as compared with an estimated total of $41,533,470,000 unrestricted banks on June 30, 1933, a gain of approximately four and one-half billions in the year due to reopenings, return of hoarded cash, gold imports, and Federal borrowing. Largest increase in deposits recently has flowed from the lending and spending of the funds created by Federal borrowings.

The current deposit totals are now in excess of the figure registered on June 30, 1932, but are still nearly 14,000,000,000 below the peak registered by midyear figures in 1930. The trend for the current and preceding five years as indicated by the reports of the Comptroller of Currency has been as follows:

	No. of banks	Tl. Dep. In. Interb'k Dep.
1929	25,330	$57,910,641,000
1930	24,079	59,847,195,000
1931	22,071	56,864,744,000
1932	19,163	45,390,269,000
1933	13,600*	41,533,470,000
1934	15,597	46,037,735,000

*Estimate unrestricted.

The figures for commercial banks and trust companies on June 30, 1934, as reported by the FDIC and for mutual savings banks on July 1, as reported by the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, are combined by the American Banker as follows:

Freight Loads Per Car Gain, Survey Shows

Despite a reduction, owing to business conditions, in the amount of freight traffic handled by the railroads, the average load per car of carload freight has been gradually increasing, according to tabulations just completed by the car service division of the American Railway Association and made public yesterday.

For all carload traffic, which includes agricultural products, minerals, live stock and forest products, as well as manufactures and miscellaneous freight, the average load per car was 35½ tons in 1933. This was an increase of three-fifths of a ton greater than in 1932, and an increase of one-fifth of a ton greater than in 1931.

With the exception of 1930, when it was 35 7-10 tons, the average for 1933 was greater than for any year since 1932, when these reports were first compiled and for which year the average was 33 1-5 tons. The effect of this increase in the average load per car is that the railroads are getting greater utilization out of their equipment than formerly.

Bonds Decline One-Tenth in Quiet Trading

Called Liberty Issue Climbs as Transfers Are Put at $12,706,000.

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—Holders of the called Liberty fourth 4¼s apparently were well pleased with the Treasury's refunding offer of 3¼ per cent bonds or 2¾ per cent notes and the Liberty issue was the most active in today's bond market.

Prices were rather irregular among other United States Government securities. There was a turnover of the called Liberties of some $3,710,000, with an advance of 14-32ds of a point to 101.6.

Sales Total $12,706,000.

Transfers of all bonds amounted to $12,706,000, par value. The Government list accounted for $7,140,000 of this total. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans was off one-tenth of a point at 83.3.

Washington's financing terms, including an offer to exchange new 1½ per cent 2-year notes for the maturing $525,000,000 of certificates, seemingly was entirely satisfactory to the financial district. In some quarters the rate of 3¼ per cent for the refunding of the Liberties was a little higher than had been expected earlier, but it was pointed out that the recent unsettlement of the Government market undoubtedly caused the officials to stiffen the interest on the new 10-12-year issue.

Most banking circles had no doubt but that the conversion of the maturing certificates and the more than $1,700,000,000 of called Liberties would be entirely successful.

Corporation Loans.

Corporation loans were dull and irregular throughout. The rails exhibited a rather heavy tone. Losses ranging from 1 to 2 points or so were suffered by some issues of Alleghany Corporation, St. Paul, Baltimore & Ohio, Frisco, Southern, New York Central, New Haven and Wabash.

New York Traction Co. bonds were fairly active and firm. Murray Body 6½s advanced 2½ points to 99 and North American Edison 5s were 1 up at 86. Bonds of American Telephone, Consolidated Gas and many others were quite narrow. An echo of the Morro Castle ship disaster was seen in a decline of 3½ points to 50 in Atlantic Gulf & West Indies 5s. This is the parent company for the line that operated the stricken vessel.

Obligations of Argentina were in demand with gains of 1 to more than 3 points. The Australians and Colombians also held advances of a point

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Pulled down by announcement of an increase instead of an expected decrease of the United States wheat visible supply, wheat prices suffered losses late today.

Heavy rains West and Southwest likely to improve soil conditions for domestic winter seeding tended also to weaken values.

Preceding the late decline of wheat prices, however, the market reflected considerable buying of futures for millers, and made moderate transient gains.

Wheat Closes Easy.

Wheat closed easy, ¾ to ⅞ under Saturday's finish; December, new, 1.06⅝@1.06¾; corn, ½ to ⅝ down; December, new, 79¼@79⅜; oats, ⅝ off to ⅜ up, and provisions at 12 to 20 cents decline.

During most of the day wheat traders showed a disposition to await the Government September crop report due after the close. The Government estimates of wheat production were not expected to differ greatly from recent unofficial forecasts and this idea proved to be well founded, but more or less evening up of accounts took place, and served at times to strengthen prices.

Some notice was also taken of a curtailment of the amount of wheat on ocean passage, as compared with last week and last month.

Weakness of Securities.

Weakness of securities at New York contributed further to bearish sentiment among wheat traders in the late dealings. There was also wheat selling here by spreaders who were simultaneously purchasing at Winnipeg.

Another influence that counted in favor of wheat bears was selling of corn on the part of numerous holders who correctly anticipated that the Government crop report as to corn would make a disappointing exhibit for friends of higher prices.

Corn and oats nevertheless took their cue mainly from wheat. The Government estimate of 1934 corn production, 1,484,602,000 bushels, compared with recent private forecasts of 1,446,000,000 bushels.

Provisions weakened owing to sharp downturns of hog values.

Steel Demand Gains Slightly; Operations Cut

Rate of Output Reduced to 18 per cent for Past Week.

Cleveland, Sept. 10.—A slight gain in steel demand, mainly representing orders held back during the holidays, has emerged since Labor Day, while steelworks operations last week due to the suspension on Monday averaged only 18 per cent, down one-half point from the preceding week, states magazine Steel.

So far the improvement has been too scattered to indicate a definite trend. Sheet mill operations, responding to miscellaneous and seasonal purchasing, have advanced 3 points to 20 per cent, while tinplate mills, reflecting export sales, are up 4 to 40 per cent.

Automobile production during the week increased about 25 per cent to 40,000 cars, on resumption by Ford, though the aggregate still was 12,009 units short of the weekly output before manufacturers shut down for holidays. Preparations for new models generally are indefinite, and except for tentative inquiries from partsmakers there is nothing to indicate an early renewal in buying from this source.

Recovery May Be Delayed.

As the leading consuming groups continue to lag, the opinion among steel producers is strong that there will be no broad and substantial recovery in the markets until after the fall elections, or until the Government's policies are more clearly defined.

Structural shape awards for the week dropped to 7,224 tons, from 15,790 tons in the preceding week. Few new projects have come out. In the final plans for Chevrolet's Baltimore assembly plant, on which bids will be asked shortly, 5,000 tons of shapes are required, double the amount originally contemplated.

Pending cast pipe orders from municipalities aided by Government funds are large, but there is no certainty that most of them will be awarded before winter. Lone Star Gas Co., Dallas, Tex., has decided to lay a 75-mile line in Texas with pipe salvaged from another line, cutting out 8,000 tons of new pipe. This is the second instance in three weeks that a Western company has decided to lay an important line with old pipe.

New Equipment Inquiries.

Pennsylvania Railroad is inquiring for 10 to 50 locomotives, and it is reported a Western road will enter the market this week for 1,000 freight cars. A leading car-builder is erecting a freight car to demonstrate a special construction, five tons lighter than the standard type, to carry ten tons more freight.

For the first time in recent years several heavy export orders for foundry coke have been booked at Pittsburgh. Pig iron consumption by stove and range manufacutrers has increased moderately.

Steel ingot production in August averaged 50,495 gross tons daily, 14.3 per cent less than in July, and lowest since February, 1933. The total for the month was 1,363,359 tons, down 7.4 per cent. Output for eight months is 19,016,832 tons, compared with 14,906,311 tons in the first eight months last year.

Pig Iron Output.

August developed another sharp reduction in active blast furnace stacks, a net loss of 13, to 61 in operation at the close of the month, following the loss of 18 in July. Daily average pig iron output for the month, 34,199 gross tons, as well as the total for the month, 1,060,187 tons, was down 13.7 per cent from July, and lowest since May, 1933. For the eight months this year production of 12,141,339 tons represents a gain of 50.3 per cent over the period last year.

Steelworks operations last week in the Pittsburgh district dropped 2 points to 8 per cent; Chicago 4½ to 23; eastern Pennsylvania 3 to 15½; Wheeling 3 to 23. Cleveland was up 9 to 24; Youngstown 5 to 23. Detroit held at 77; New England 25, and Buffalo 19.

Steel's iron and steel price composite is unchanged at $32.17; the finished steel composite holds at $54, while the scrap index is down 4 cents to $9.54.

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute today estimated steel production for the current week at 20.9 per cent of capacity, against 18.4 per cent last week and 22.3 per cent a month ago.

The increase lifts the operating rate 2.5 points or 13.6 per cent as compared with last week's rate which was the lowest reached since the bank holiday in March, 1933. This low level was partly due to the Labor Day holiday.

Channel Yields Soldier's Body

Corporal at Fort Myer Had Been Missing Since Friday.

Harbor Police, dragging Georgetown Channel near Key Bridge yesterday, recovered the body of Corporal John H. Joyce, 28, missing Fort Myer soldier.

The body was found near the Virginia shore, wedged beneath a large rock. A brother, William Joyce, of Clarendon, Va., identified the body at the morgue. The soldier's clothes were found Saturday night in his parked automobile near Macayes' boathouse on the Virginia side.

Authorities are puzzled as to whether Joyce drowned while swimming, or was a victim of foul play. He had been missing since Friday, when he left Fort Myer on a fishing trip.

Joyce was a native of Philadelphia. He was attached to Headquarters Company at the fort and was unmarried.

Walt Mason, Himself

Good Old Days.

In olden times, remote from these, the housewife had no time to rest; as busy as a dog with fleas, she toiled along with endless zest. She baked the fragrant loaves of bread which were a solace and delight, which made the old man leave his bed to eat three slices in the night. She made the pies and doughnuts, too, compounded jam, a tasteful mess, and other things we used to chew with rapture that we can't express. On Monday morning she arose at half past four or five o'clock, and washed about a ton of clothes, and used up soft soap by the crock. On Tuesday ironing must be done, and she was bent above her board, until at setting of the sun, she felt like someone slugged and gored. She bought green coffee by the pound, and then the blackened stuff she ground in that old mill you must recall. Indeed she had a frightful time, her life was void of mirth and jest, she always thought it was a crime to sit down in a chair and rest. She made the dresses for the girls, the seams and gussets, hems and bands, the boys were dressed like belted earls in clothing fashioned by her hands. I think of all her toilsome ways, when I survey the modern game, and how we manage things these days. The wife remarks, "Augustus Fred, I wish you'd call up Baker Spry's, and order seven loaves of bread, and half a dozen concrete pies. And you might call the laundry, too, and bid them come for this week's wash; their weekly trip is overdue, and their excuses are but tosh. And ask the grocer if he'll send a dozen cans of navy beans, and tell the tailor to attend, and send out Willie's summer jeans."

League Council Agrees to Seat Russ Delegate

Soviet Union May Be Formally Accepted by End of Month.

Geneva, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—The council of the League of Nations, in closed session tonight, agreed in principle to welcome Russia into the league and grant the Soviet Union a permanent seat on the council.

The approval moved Russia swiftly toward full-fledged membership in the league—a gesture desired by the major powers, led by France. Some opposition remains, but it was generally believed Moscow's emissary would be sitting as a member of the league by the end of the month. The issue was one of the major problems facing the fifteenth league assembly, which convened today.

Dr. Edouard Benes, of Czechoslovakia, in the chair, praised the tendency of the Roosevelt Administration to cooperate more closely with the league.

"U. S. Drawn Nearer."

"The United States undoubtedly is being drawn much nearer the Geneva organization," he said, "and their cooperation seems much closer than in former years."

The assembly was hushed when Dr. Benes referred to the Soviet Union. He described Russia as "a country without whose cooperation conditions in Europe and the world will never quite return to normal."

"I am aware," he added slowly, "that certain quarters harbor misgivings on this subject, and their inclinations to maintain that such an eventuality would not strengthen the league."

He failed to agree, however, and hinted even at the necessity of a change in the capitalist system of the world as a result of the prolonged economic depression. He referred to the threat of war hanging over the world as another reason why the league's peace machinery needed the active cooperation of such powers as influential as Russia.

Hits Capitalistic Mistakes.

"Perhaps an entire generation is condemned to weakness and a long, painful struggle toward reconstruction of the present economic, social and political systems, entailing abnormal international relations."

Dr. Benes declared the "real weakness in the league's record" was its failure to terminate the war between Bolivia and Paraguay in South America, over possession of the Gran Chaco area.

BLACKIE BEAR

Grandpa Puts One Over.

While a rabbit hunt was going on yesterday, Benny was sitting on the seesaw near the boathouse, and when he saw Grandpa coming across the log with the big rabbit in his mouth, he "woofed" most as loud as Blackie could have done. It did seem like a real frolic to see Grandpa go hunting and bringing in meat that way, and he ran to the house to tell Bettie and Grandma what Grandpa had done; and so by the time the old man got to the house they were both on the porch, waving their aprons and saying "Hoorah for Grandpa!" The old fellow really was tickled over what he had done, but he went around to the kitchen and laid the rabbit down and said: "That's nothing; anybody can catch a rabbit."

It was a nice sunny day, and after dinner Grandpa and Howler and the children went down to the lake and just sat around on the steps of the boathouse. And then the children went over and played on the joggle board and the seesaw, while Grandpa and Howler talked about things down on the Creek. Yes, they had all of those things, for Jocko was a real good carpenter, and he had built a lot of things while he was up there. One end of the seesaw was set toward the hill, and the other end toward the water, and while the children were playing on it a twinkle came into Grandpa's eyes, and he said: "You children have had that board long enough. Swap seats with us, and let the old folks ride a little."

Grandpa had made up his mind to show the whole mountain crowd that he was alive, and he thought that maybe Howler, being a good sport, could stand another joke from the Old Man. When he and Howler got on the seesaw he took the end next to the lake, and he was so much heavier than Howler that he had to push the board up so that Howler had lots the longest end, before they could balance the weight. So Grandpa would just jog up and down a little way on his short end of the board, while Howler would go away up every time Grandpa went down. Grandpa would slip about and wiggle around just like he was about to fall off, and then he slipped clear down to the end of the board and went down hard. The end of the board went down and struck the ground with a thump, and it threw Howler clear loose from the board, and away over Grandpa's head into the lake. Talk about a splash! Well, that was a sure-enough one, and Grandpa slipped off the board and into the sand, and was getting up and beating the dirt off of his coat when Howler crawled out of the water and was shaking himself to get the water out of his hair.

"It does look like I am getting clumsy, the way I slipped down to the end of that board," Grandpa said. "I'll try to do better next time," and Benny would tell you that what he saw on the old man's face looked a lot like a smile, but he tried to cover it up by scratching his nose, so Howler wouldn't see it.

"Come on back and I'll try to do better," but Howler was half way to the house, and anybody would have thought that he had enough of seesawing for one day.

Phillips Returns To Capital Post

Takes Over State Office From Moore.

After serving as Acting Secretary of State for ten days, Assistant Secretary R. Walton Moore stepped aside yesterday for Undersecretary William Phillips, who returned to Washington from Fort Niagara, N. Y., where he represented the United States at the Four Nations celebration, the Associated Press said.

Moore, whose home is Fairfax, Va., is the first Virginian to occupy the Secreatry of State's office since Abel P. Upshur in the Tyler Administration nearly 100 years ago.

During his brief administration, Moore initiated negotiations for reciprocal trade agreements with Belgium and several Latin-American countries, and announced the collapse of Soviet-American debt negotiations he had been conducting with Ambassador Troyanovsky.

Group Works 7 Days, Gets Paid for 5 1-2

While the textile workers are striking for a 30-hour week, employes of the Public Utilities Commission are working the equivalent of seven days a week, but getting paid for only five and a half.

Reduced from 32 to 17 because of the drastic slash in the commission's appropriation, the commission employes have been forced to adopt a schedule of overtime for all in order to do the most essential work.
